STRIKERS' CHILDREN TO PARADE

QUIET IN LAWRENCE

Small Increase in Number of Operatives Reporting for Work

TODAY'S FEATURES OF THE STRIKE

Strike leaders, Ettor and Giovannitti, arraigned in police court on charge of being accessories to shooting of Anna Lopizzo.

Strikers' children to parade in New York, Philadelphia and Washington.

No great gain in number of operatives at work today.

Attempt to end strike not yet successful.

LAWRENCE, Feb. 9.—Interest in the Lawrence strike today was transferred to the Lawrence police court where Ettor and Giovannitti, the strike leaders were arraigned. Practically no gain was made in the number of operatives returning to work, and the negotiations looking to a settlement of the strike made little progress.

The announcement that the strikers' children will be taken to New York, Philadelphia and Washington and that they will parade the streets of those cities excited much interest.

At a meeting today the Pacific mill print works employees met and voted to ask for a 15 per cent. increase and time and a half for overtime.

A SPIRITED MEETING

Municipal Council Resumes Consideration of Dept. Estimates

The municipal council chamber at city hall was the scene of another quite spirited meeting this forenoon when the members of the council gathered for the purpose of resuming their consideration of department estimates. The council adjourned at 12 o'clock to meet again at 10 o'clock tomorrow forenoon.

That there is great interest in the meetings and operations of this year's government is evidenced by the fact that at every meeting all available seats are taken. There was another little war of words between Aldermen Barrett and Brown this forenoon, and a little cross fire of this kind while it may cross the line of civility, adds a little to the gaiety of the town.

Total Cut Up to Date
The council has not yet succeeded in making a very great impression on the total estimate for the year. The exact cut up to date amounts to $32,401.74 and in order to get the total estimate down to where it belongs it will be necessary to cut it to the tune of about $204,000. Thus far the council has been using small knives, but later on they will be obliged to use the cleaver and the quicker they get to it the better.

A COMMON SYMPTOM OF INDIGESTION
CAUSED BY FERMENTING SUBSTANCES IN THE STOMACH
Sourness or undue acidity of the stomach, which results when substances remain so long in the stomach that they ferment, is one of the most common and disagreeable of all the symptoms of indigestion. It is attended with nausea and belching and sometimes even with vomiting. Sufferers from this trouble are finding wonderful relief in Dyspeptics, which although not a strong alkali immediately sweeten the stomach, and begin at once to aid the digestion. Dyspeptics are pleasant to take and economical, and there is no good reason why anyone needing such a remedy should be without them. They are prepared by the G. L. Fison Co., Lowell, Mass. to have the question answered, and Mr. Brown allowed they would have to wait for the report of the commissioner on finance.

Alderman Brown moved that the estimate of last year, $12,235, be eliminated from the total revenue for 1912.

Alderman Barrett said this government had no right to deduct the amount in question.

"If you do not provide for this amount as it is provided for in the auditor's report, it means that you will increase your so called temporary loan to the amount named, $32,235."

Mr. Barrett said that the street department was responsible for the shortage.

"You were chairman of the committee on streets, last year," said Ald. Brown.

"Yes, but I was not responsible for the management of the department," said Mr. Barrett.

a ten year basis for the erection of a bridge in Market street.

"That amount has been spent," he said, "and the bridge has not been built."

"That is the kind of financial management," he continued, "that this city has been subjected to and this is the kind of management that I have objected to and still object to. As a member of last year's city government I was not aware of the spending of the money borrowed for the Market street bridge, an illegal transfer, because it did not come before the city government."

"Market street bridge has got to be rebuilt and when it is built the city will have two loans on its hands. Do you wonder that the city's finances are in a tough condition?"

Two Motions

Ald. Brown moved that the council proceed to recommend appropriations from an estimate based on $1,426,793.17. The motion was not seconded.

Mayor O'Donnell moved that the council proceed to recommend on a basis of $1,374,574.17, allowing $29,000 from the estimated revenue for uncollectable taxes and overlays.

Price of Licenses

The question of dependence upon revenues was referred to and it was stated that the revenue from the liquor licenses last year fell short because of the change in price of licenses brought about by the bar and bottle bill.

Ald. Cummings, who is head of the licensing board, said he had not heard that the price of licenses would be changed this year.

Mayor O'Donnell's motion to proceed on a basis of $1,374,574.17 was seconded and voted, and the council finally got down to business and decided the appropriations.

Assessors' Department

Commissioner Donnelly explained the items in the assessors' department showing where and why increases were asked.

He said that more money would be required this year because of the extra work that would come as the result of so many women registering.

Alderman Barrett said that men should go to Boston and see if they could get the clerks in the city of Lowell and he suggested that $100 instead of $50, the sum asked for, be spent for expenses to Boston for that purpose. He thought it would be money well spent.

On motion of Alderman Barrett the council voted to recommend the sum of $1,533.50 for the assessors' department, $50 more than was asked for.

Treasurer's Department

Commissioner Donnelly explained the items in the treasurer's department and he made a request for an increase in pay for the clerk in the treasurer's office; an increase, he said, that did not amount to very much and was well deserved in point of value and length of service.

At 11:15 Alderman Brown moved to adjourn. The motion was not seconded.

Alderman Cummings, speaking to the question of increase of pay, said that he did not see that the way was clear for an increase of pay.

"I have had applications for more pay from at least 25 persons employed in my department and had more than 400 applications for work from different ones."

He believed, he said, that many of them were worthy but he could not see his way clear to encourage it at the present time.

The matter was allowed to go over to a later date.

On motion of Alderman Barrett it was voted to recommend $12,223.58 for the treasurer's department, a total cut in this department of $1,002.10.

Alderman Barrett moved that the sum of $7500 be allowed for department of elections. The motion was seconded and so voted. This sum of $8,131.00 was asked for, a cut of $331.

The registrars of voters asked for $5,000.00 and the council recommended that the sum of $4500 be allowed, a cut of $500.

Mr. Barrett moved that the amount allowed for salaries in the city clerk's office be $3992. It was so voted. It was voted to make the amount for salaries

COURT CROWDED

Strike Leaders Smiled and Nodded to Friends

LAWRENCE, Feb. 9.—That Strike Leader Joseph Ettor and Arturo Giovannitti were responsible for some of the riots that have occurred here during the textile strike was the contention of District Attorney Henry Atwill when the men were given a hearing in the police court today. The government tried to prove that as a result of the advice and counsel of the defendants riots occurred, during one of which Anna Lopizzo was shot and killed.

But five of the more than a score of witnesses had testified up to noon. Numerous objections to the questions of the district attorney were made by counsel for the defense and some of the witnesses were hostile to the government in the opinion of the district attorney. It was believed that no decision would be rendered before late today, and it was thought that possibly the case would continue tomorrow.

dries in the city clerk's office $1300, a total appropriation of $7292.

Purchasing Agent's Office

Alderman Barrett moved that the purchasing agent's office be allowed $5006 for salaries. This would mean a reduction in salaries and Alderman Cummings said that while he would not vote to increase salaries he did not want to vote for a reduction.

Mr. Barrett then moved that the total appropriation for the purchasing agent's department be $5000.

On motion of Alderman Cummings the matter was postponed to tomorrow at 10 a. m.

THE COURT PROCEEDINGS

(By The Sun Staff Correspondent)

Half a company of the militia guarded the police station during the morning. This precaution was taken to disperse any possible gathering of the curious. The courtroom is very small and because of this only those connected with the case were allowed to be present. Many persons who desired to witness the proceedings were turned away at the doors of the station.

After the regular session of the police court, Joseph J. Ettor and Arturo Giovannitti were tried on the charges of accessory to murder. Ettor was arrested on Tuesday night, January 30 and Giovannitti early in the morning of January 31. They were arraigned before Associate Justice Fred N. Chandler, Wednesday, January 31. They were represented by Atty. George E. Roemer, Jr., Boston. Both pleaded not guilty. The cases were continued until Feb. 9 and in the meantime the defendants went to jail, bail having been refused.

Defendants Smiled
Ettor was the first to come into the dock from the room down stairs. He was followed by Giovannitti. Both smiled as they greeted their counsel and friends in the spectators' row. When Ettor and Giovannitti came into the police station, they smiled to the newspapermen and shook hands with them. Both were clean shaven. Both looked none the worse for their ten days' confinement in the Essex county jail.

As pleas of not guilty had already been entered no pleas were entered this morning. Atty. John P. S. Mahoney of Lawrence made his appearance in the case as counsel for Ettor, while John S. Lynch of Boston appeared for Giovannitti. George E. Roemer, Jr., was associate counsel in both cases, having appeared for them and strikers since the trouble began. Leone Muel, who is associated with Mr. Roemer in the law business in Boston was also in court and busied himself taking down notes of the trial.

OVERCOME BY GAS

Woman Dead and Two Others Unconscious

PITTSFIELD, Feb. 8.—Aphyndium by illuminating gas caused the death yesterday of Mrs. Marie Pease, aged 60 years, although there was no gas pipe in the house. Mrs. Oscar Herman and her eight-year-old son who lived downstairs in the same house were also overcome, but they were saved by the timely arrival of Mr. Herman, who, on returning to dinner, found his wife and boy unconscious on the floor.

Mrs. Pease, who had no near relatives, was known to have a bottle of gas, and had said that she never would live in a house where there was a gas pipe. It is believed that the gas leaked into the house from a broken pipe in the street.

FOUND GUILTY

FOUR WOMEN WERE CHARGED WITH SHOPLIFTING

BOSTON, Feb. 8.—Four women were before Judge J. J. in the police court yesterday charged with shoplifting. Two of the women whose names were searched were found to have various articles valued at $135.

One of the women gave the name of Mrs. Edith L. Child of 218 Shawmut avenue. The other woman says her name is Mrs. Maud Carpenter, and she lives at 14 Waverley street. Both women were sentenced to the women's prison at Sherborn, and appealed. They were held in $25 for trial in the superior court.

The police are searching for a woman who gave the name of Ellen White, and who said she lived on Crescent avenue in Chelsea, who defaulted when her case was called. The woman when arrested told Inspector Abbott that she had stolen the lot of groceries, including seven eggs, found on her person, because she was poor. However, when placed in the city prison she put up $50 cash bail and secured her release.

A woman giving the name of Anna McDonald was sent to the house of correction for two months.

Another giving the name of Anna McDonald was sent to the house of correction for two months.

Another woman giving the name of Mrs. Nellie E. Hagan, and claiming to live in East Cambridge, was fined $10 which she paid.

MAN ASKS $25,000

HE SAYS HIS WIFE'S AFFECTIONS WERE ALIENATED

BOSTON, Feb. 8.—Convinced that his wife's affections were alienated, and persuaded her to sue for divorce in the Norfolk county court on Jan. 2, 1912, James Vincent Fitzpatrick of Brookline has brought suit for $25,000 against Mrs. Thomas S. McGowan of 16 Stebbins street, Brookline.

Mrs. Fitzpatrick's suit alleges habits of intemperance and general failure to provide satisfactorily for herself and children. Mr. Fitzpatrick believes that, as their family life was happy prior to her departure to her parents' summer home in 1909, her parents are responsible for the estrangement and resultant suit for divorce.

BILLERICA

The annual town meeting of the citizens of Billerica will be held on Saturday, March 23rd and although that date is not far distant there has been but very little enthusiasm displayed, especially by candidates for office. As a general rule politics is the main topic of conversation in the town several weeks before the meeting, but this year there seems to be a backwardness on the part of candidates for office.

It is expected that the members of the present board of selectmen will be candidates for re-election. Messrs. Sheridan and Sanford have signified their intention of being in the field for re-election and undoubtedly Mr. Smith will also be a candidate. Mr. A. H. Jones, chairman of the board of assessors and Frank Alexander are also expected to be candidates.

There will be two petitions to fill on the school committee, besides the various other positions and it is expected that there will be contests for the various offices.

The regular meeting of Thomas Talbot Lodge, N. E. O. E., was held Wednesday night. At the conclusion of the business session literary exercises were held. Representatives from various out of town lodges of the order were in attendance and the evening was spent in an enjoyable manner.

Ann John Patten circle, No. 10, Ladies of the G. A. B., held an all day session Wednesday in the town hall. Mrs. Mira L. Gardner occupied the chair and there were a number of out of town guests present. At six o'clock in the evening a supper was served in the banquet hall which was enjoyed by about 250 people. The supper committee was composed of Mrs. Brewster, Mrs. Gardner and Mrs. Murphy, and they were assisted by Mrs. Whitcomb, Mrs. Hunt, Mrs. Peabody, Mrs. Ritchie, Mrs. Kendall, Mrs. Jannett and Mrs. Johnson.

The following program was presented in an excellent manner during the evening, and each number received much applause.

Piano solo, Clara Carroll of Everett; recitation, "Song from the Ring of the Cross," John Gilman; piano solo, Frank Bradley of Everett; address, Mr. Stevens of Billerica; song, Mr. Edwin M. Williams; piano solo, Katherine Maudsley of Boston; recitation, Mrs. Olive Merriam; old fashioned drink, Commodore Smith and Harwood; address, Commodore Gardner.

Mrs. Anna Gilman has been of providing and arranging the program. Mrs. C. B. Teten was the pianist. The program was followed by a social hour and dancing continued until 12 o'clock.

MATRIMONIAL

A pretty wedding was celebrated in Graceland, Woburn, when Mr. Mathias Leonard and Miss Marie Cole were united in the bonds of matrimony. The ceremony was performed at 10 o'clock at the parsonage residence of St. John's church, Rev. J. F. Schenck officiating. The young couple were attended by Messrs. Debra Cole and Samuel Macomber. After the ceremony a delightful dinner was served at the home of the bride's parents in Maple street and in the evening a reception was held at the home of the bridegroom's parents in Beacon street.

THE SAGAMORE CLUB

Held Pretty Dancing Party in Associate Hall Last Evening

One of the prettiest dancing parties of the season was held in the Associate hall last evening. The affair was conducted under the auspices of the Sagamore club, and it was the fifth annual party held by the club, and like its predecessors was a great success.

The Sagamore club is composed of well known young men of the city. During the summer months the menstrated that the club is one of the most popular of the city. In the face of several other attractions the hall was comfortably filled and all thoroughly enjoyed the evening's festivities.

The hall was beautifully decorated and there was a generous display of red and white bunting, draped here and there with touches of green that made an effect most pleasing to the eye. The stage was set with bunting of the prevailing colors and a row of potted plants and palms lined the front, all but cutting off the view of the members of Kiltudge's orchestra who furnished excellent music for the affair.

The program opened shortly after 8 o'clock with a concert of popular airs by the orchestra. At 8:30 the first dance was started and from then until 10:30 there was a series of feature numbers enjoyed. After the intermission dancing was resumed and continued until midnight.

One of the features of the evening's entertainment was the singing of John R. Myers. Mr. Myers sang during the dances and his clear baritone voice of fine quality rang out with great effect. Particularly in one number did he make a decided hit. This was his rendition of the popular "College Rag." He was obliged to respond to no less than seven encores. Another number that was greatly enjoyed was "Old Dutch Time." Mr. Myers sang the latter with great expression and, as in all his numbers, several encores were demanded. The concert dance order issued by the club was of a very pretty design. The cover showed an embossed wreath of flowers around the edge, while the center was hand tinted in purple. The inscription in old English letters "Sagamores—1912" in dark purple stood out conspicuously over the tint of the latter shade.

The affair was attended by many friends from all cities. Among the out of town people present were Messrs. Agnes Bergeron, Eleanor Porrett, Martha Forrest, Ella Boudreau, Adele Van Ousen, and James Danahy of North Cambridge.

John J. Loughran was general manager of the affair and contributed much to its success. He was aided by the following: assistant general managers, Ralph T. Chapman and Eugene W. Knowlton; floor director, William H. Sullivan; assistant floor directors, Thomas J. Durkin and Francis J. Lincoln; chief aid, John P. Draper; aids, Albert H. Smith, Arthur T. O'Connell, Richard Durkin, Joseph Sullivan, John Sheehan, Frank Whalen, Francis J. Loughran, William Campbell, John McQuade, John Durkin, John P. Ward, John Duggan, Robert Loughran, Bernard Kaur, John Ready, Joseph Mahan, Andrew A. McCarthy, John Day, John Barre, William J. Thomas, J. Fay and William O'Malley.

Although Mrs. Northrop had not been as well as previous to a severe attack of pneumonia, a year ago, she was nevertheless able, and preferred to do for herself, and therefore related a couple of rooms in the same house with her daughter, Mrs. Allen Patterson. On the morning in question she started her fire and prepared her breakfast as usual, and also, as was her custom, Mrs. Patterson and her small daughter Ethel came in to see if she was all right. As the child entered the room her grandmother remarked "I don't want any

EXQUISITE LOVELINESS OF HAIR AND SKIN

(Annie Bly in The Italin.)

The exquisite loveliness of English girls' complexions can be gained by American women who take the same care. Instead of powder and paint, use a simple lotion made as follows: by dissolving an original package of sayalene in a half-pint of witch hazel. Apply in morning, rubbing gently, and your complexion will be as clear, soft and satiny as a baby's—with no dark or muddy discolorations.

"Abundant and glossy hair follows continued dry shampooing. Wetting takes the life out, and makes hair brittle and colorless. Put a cupful of cornmeal in fruit jar, add an original package of Therap, shake together, and you have a six months' supply of shampoo powder. Sprinkle a little on the head and brush out well. Do this every week or two and your hair will be bright, fine and wavy."

"Don't neglect a cold. You must be well to look your best. Remember, colds lead to chronic catarrh. The best remedy for colds, catarrh, sore throat, croup, etc., is Mother's Salve. It is wonderfully healing."

As Ethel had no cake and nothing had been said about any she understood something was wrong and called her mother. Mrs. Patterson hurried to her but was only in time to see her mother fall into convulsions from which she never recovered consciousness. Mrs. Northrop had been subject to these attacks at intervals since her illness. Her age was 76. Mrs. Northrop was from Nova Scotia but had lived in Groton for several years. She was the widow of Silas Northrop, whose death occurred a few years ago. She was married twice. Three children, Mrs. Maggie Patterson, Herbert Perkins and Silas Northrop survive her. The funeral was held from her late home Wednesday, Rev. H. A. Cornell officiating. The customary offering of choice flowers was abundant.

HARTWELL—The funeral of Ira Hartwell took place yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the Lowell cemetery chapel. The services were conducted by Rev. Geo. F. Keenagott, pastor of the First Unitarian Congregational church. The bearers were Messrs. Harold W. Harris, C. and Geo. W. Hartwell and C. B. Moody. Burial was in the family lot in the Lowell cemetery. The funeral arrangements were in charge of Mr. George E. Perley, under the direction of Undertaker George W. Healey. Mr. Hartwell was 62 years of age and was well known throughout New England in his business as a contracting stone and brick mason. He said the first trunk sewer in this city, and built many of the foundations and large chimneys of Lowell's mills. ### FATHER SEEKS $3,000

Blames Landlord for His Son's Injuries

BOSTON, Feb. 8.—Ephraim Stone of Somerville is named defendant in a suit for $3,000 filed in the superior civil court yesterday by Harry Beresofsky, through his father, Jacob Beresofsky, to recover damages for injuries received by him in a fire, Dec. 28, which the complaint charges was set by the defendant or his agents, in a tenement house at 35 Cooper street. Young Beresofsky, who is a minor child, was burned severely and still is confined at the City hospital. The fire started shortly after 6:30 o'clock in the evening in the basement of the dwelling owned by Stone, and had the appearance of being set. The Beresofsky boy lived with his father on the third floor and was burned while attempting to escape.

The declaration filed by the plaintiff's attorneys, Kulesky & Cohen, states the boy's injuries were caused by reason of the defendant's willful act of the defendant, his agents and servants, in setting said house on fire and failing to provide safe, suitable, sufficient and proper means of egress from said building.

Since the fire Beresofsky has resided at 67 Elm street, South End. It will be some little time before his son will be able to leave the hospital.

AN INTERESTING TALK

REV. FRANCIS J. MULLIN,
Spiritual Director.JOHN J. HAVILAND,
President.Wm. F. Thornton Relates the
Story of Paul Clifford

The Holy Name society of St. Michael's church, conducted a smoke talk and entertainment in Odd Fellows hall in Bridge street last night and if the attendance can be taken as a criterion the membership of the organization is rapidly increasing through the zealous and untiring efforts of Rev. Francis J. Mullin, the spiritual director.

Rev. Fr. Mullin, assisted by an efficient committee, arranged an excellent program for the occasion and those who attended spent a very enjoyable evening. Last night's affair was one of the periodical gatherings which has materially assisted in enlisting the members to bring in new members and which has resulted in playing the variety on the high basis it enjoys at the present time.

Shortly after eight o'clock President John J. Haviland of the society called to order and after welcoming the members introduced Mr. William F. Thornton as the speaker of the evening. President Haviland said that Mr. Thornton needed no introduction to the members inasmuch as he had appeared before the organization on previous occasions both in song and readings.

Mr. Thornton gave a very interesting talk on the story of "Paul Clifford," demonstrating that what the novel which he was considering sought to do was to open the eyes of society to the impossible methods in use of handling the question of the criminal and of crime. He said:

"Richard L. Dagdale, a member of the executive committee of the prison association of New York says: 'Over a million and a quarter dollars of loss was caused by a single family without reckoning the cash paid for whiskey, or taking into account the enticement of pauperism and crime of the survivors in succeeding generations and the incurable disease, filth and insanity growing out of the debauchery and reaching further than we can calculate.'"

"It is getting to be time to ask, do our courts, our laws, our almshouses and our jails deal with the question present."

"I will quote the following from an editorial which appeared some time ago in The Lowell Sun. It was as follows: 'In the Concord reformatory not long ago a boy named Lewis Hoffer, aged 16 years, committed suicide while in solitary confinement. He had committed some little breach of the rules and was punished by being placed in solitary confinement for a certain period. This boy seemed to take on badly when placed in the cell alone without a book, a picture or anything to occupy his attention. At night, especially this matter of confining a boy in a dark room is highly injudicious if not absolutely cruel. Many boys are afraid to stay alone in a dark room, and especially might they be found in a dark cell in a reformatory. Corporal punishment is forbidden in the state reformatories, but there is no boy who would not prefer a whipping to being placed in the solitary confinement provided in the reformatory. These so-called reformatories believe their name, for strange to say, when a boy goes to one of them for the commission of one crime, he returns for the commission of many. Why call such places reformatories? It is a misnomer. The whole system is wrong and instead of reforming the youths sent to them, these institutions either send them to death or else make them confirmed criminals. It is time the state authorities investigated the reform system with a view to making them reformatories in reality as well as in name.'"

Mr. Thornton then referred to the subject on which he was going to speak—"Paul Clifford." He said that

The novel of Paul Clifford was written by Sir Edward Bulwer Lytton, who was born in 1803 and died in 1871. His father was an Englishman, and his mother was an Irish woman. At the time of his death he was acting as British ambassador to Paris. The novel of Paul Clifford was written in 1838. In England at that time highway robbery, as well as several other crimes were punishable by death.

Continuing Mr. Thornton said: "This novel so far differs from the other fictions by the same author, that it seeks to draw its interest rather from practical than ideal sources. Out of some 12 novels or romances, running a great variety of scene and character, from 'Pelham' to 'The Pilgrims of the Rhine' from 'Ben Hur' to 'The Last Days of Pompeii,' 'Paul Clifford' is the only one in which a robber has been made the hero, or the peculiar phases of life which he has undergone have been brought into any prominent description."

Without pausing to inquire what paths of manners, or what order of crime and sorrow are open to art and capable of admitting to the proper ends of fiction, I may be permitted to observe that the present subject was selected and the novel written, with a two-fold object:

First, to draw attention to two errors in our penal institutions, viz., a vicious prison discipline and a can-gary criminal code—the habit of corrupting the boy by the very punishment that ought to redeem him, and then handing the man at the first occasion, as the easiest way of getting rid of our own blunders.

Between the example of crime which the hero learns from the felons in the prison yard, and the horrible reality with which the mob gather round the door at Newgate, there is a connection which a writer may be pardoned for tracing to the regions of conjecture, to trace and to detect. As for this book it is a picture of the king's highway than the law's royal road to the gallows, a satire on the short cut established between the house of correction and the condemned cell.

"A second and a lighter object in the novel of 'Paul Clifford,' (and hence the introduction of a semi-horrible of grotesque in the earlier chapters), was to show that there is nothing essentially different between vulgar vice and fashionable vice, and that the slave of the one circle is but an easy paraphrase of the cant of the other."

The tragic truth which he hidden in what may be called a philosophy of circumstance, strike through our philanthropy, upon our imagination. We see masses of our fellow creatures, the victims of circumstances over which they had no control, contaminated by infancy by the example of parents; their intelligence either extinguished or turned against them, according as the conscience is stunted in ignorance or perverted to apologies for vice. A child who is cradled in ignominy; whose schoolmaster is the felon; whose academy is the house of correction; who breathes an atmosphere in which virtue is poisoned, to which religion does not pierce, becomes less a responsible and reasoning human being than a wild beast which we suffer to range in the wilderness, till it prowls near our homes, and we kill it in self-defence.

"In this respect, the novel of 'Paul Clifford' is a loud cry to society to amend the circumstance—to redeem the victim. It is an appeal from humanity to law."

"There is in this work a subtler question suggested, but not solved. That question which perplexes us in the generous ardor of our early youth, which, unsatisfactory as all metaphysics, we rather escape from than decide as we advance in years—viz., make what laws we please, the man who lives within the pale can be as bad as the man without."

"Compare the Paul Clifford of the fiction with the William Brandon; the hunted son and the honored father, the outcast of the law, the dispenser of the law; the felon and the judge; and as at the last they front each other, one on the seat of justice, the other at the convict's bar, can we say that the Paul Clifford is a worse man than the William Brandon?"

The speaker was listened to with rapt attention by those present and during the stirring parts of the lecture to silent were the people assembled that one could hear a pin drop. Mr. Thornton delivered the lecture in a manner which reflected much credit upon him and especially interesting was the court scene where Paul Clifford was being tried for highway robbery with his own father as the judge who subsequently sentenced him to death.

the conclusion of Mr. Thornton's talk with a loudly applauded.

Rev. Francis Mullin, spiritual director of the Holy Name society, after thanking Mr. Thornton for his excellent lecture, said that the book of Paul Clifford was food for thought inasmuch as it showed that if a child goes wrong and is sent to a reformatory that instead of improving the condition of the child it is apt to work the reverse for the child is thrown into the midst of others who know more of crime than he does, and for that reason the book of Paul Clifford brings out many prominent things.

Mr. Thomas M. Maguire, who acted as accompanist during the evening, gave several selections, after which Mr. Eugene McCarthy rendered "Mammy's Shuffling Dance" and for an encore sang "The Boatman's Violin."

Joseph Kreutmann made a hit with his recital of "Kelly's Dream" and "The Gathering of the Clans."

Henry Cherry, of the Glendale quartet, sang "Mother Machree" and "Honey Man" both of which were well applauded.

At this point Rev. Fr. Mullin addressed the members and thanked them for the interest they had taken in the Holy Name society of St. Michael's church and also the assistance they had rendered in bringing the society to its present high standard. He said that during his stay of nearly ten years in St. Michael's parish he had found in the men his greatest happiness, for, he said, while some people may say that it is work to have charge of the men, he considered it a pleasure to be at the head of the Holy Name society. "I have endeavored to do my best to assist the men," he said, "My aim is the Catholic welfare of the parish."

In speaking about the members of the society the reverend father said he knew that when he had the men with him the movement would reach out, and even though there were men in the parish who were not connected with the society he felt that they are influenced by it. He said that it is the steady and silent work that gains. In conclusion he again thanked the members for their presence.

Mr. James Conklin, the well known reader, recited George R. Sims' "The Lifeboat" in a manner which was productive of a warm applause and for an encore he recited "Stump Speech by a Quack Doctor."

Mr. William F. Thornton then sang "Father Was a Good Old Man," after which the members arose and sang "Auld Lang Syne."

The success of the affair was due to the zealous and untiring work of Rev. Fr. Mullin and for following object committee, Messrs. John J. Haviland, John Conway, John McCann, Daniel McKeegan, James Mullin and James Duddy.

GARD OF THANKS
We, the undersigned, wish to express our thanks for the many actual kindnesses and the moral offerings, rendered at the death of our beloved daughter, and for the many kind words and the many of their sympathy we are deeply grateful and will ever remember their kindness.
(Signed)

NEW PASTORS CHOSEN

Rev. Jas. J. Gilday, Lowell Boy,
Honored by Cardinal O'Connell

Cardinal O'Connell has announced in that vicinity, having been there for several changes in the personnel of the clergy of the diocese. These transfers will go into effect immediately. Several pastors have been shifted about, and five or three curates in parishes in various parts of the diocese have been advanced to parishes.

Rev. Edward J. Curtin, who for some time has been pastor of St. John's church at East Bridgewater, has been transferred from that parish and been made pastor of St. Anne's parish, in Arlington, which has had no rector since the death of the former pastor, which occurred some six or eight weeks ago.

Fr. Curtin was for some years in Lynn, and is well known throughout the diocese. He will take charge of one of the finest parishes in the Greater Boston district.

Rev. James J. Gilday, pastor of the Church of the Sacred Heart in Hanover, who has been there for the past three years or so, since Hanover was made an independent parish, has been given a much larger parish by his transfer to the pastorate of the Church of the Star of the Sea in Marblehead, where he will succeed the late Fr. Sinnick.

REV. JAMES J. GILDAY,

Fr. Gilday was born in Lowell and is very well known in the Boston diocese. He is a brilliant orator, an excellent administrator and was one of the priests who went to Rome to attend the convocations there in December. Fr. Gilday is a brother of the pastor of St. Patrick's church in Lawrence, Rev. John Gilday. Fr. James was formerly stationed at St. Patrick's church here.

As announced in last evening's Sun, Rev. Charles J. Galligan, who for 15 years was the assistant at St. Bernard's church in West Newton, has been advanced to the pastorate and has been given charge of St. Margaret's parish in Lowell, which was left vacant by the death of Rev. John J. Harkins. Father Galligan is very well known in Newton and the towns.

GIVE ME BUSINESS

Until February 15th, Then the Spring
Season Takes Care of Itself

I want business—activity—movement—animation—anything you want to call that which has the signs of life or something doing. Candor compels us to admit that things are quiet and charity ought to prevent me from heaping my troubles on you who have worries enough of your own.

But I want people to know that I am willing to go more than half way to get their business during the Tailors' dull season. I want people to know that clothing orders in February mean more to my shops and organization than any insignificant unworthy consideration of profits.

I never made an even break in my life during the dull season. As long as I stay in the tailoring business I expect to make a loss in the dull season. Tailors must lose in the month of February.

If there must be loss, give me business and loss—give me anything but dry-rot, cobwebs and dullness.

There is a Loss on These Suitings
I Offer This Week

Common sense tells you the minute you see the goods there must be a loss.

Give me your order FRIDAY or SATURDAY for a suit from the best goods American mills can produce. STANDISH WORSTEDS, SHERRIFFS WORSTEDS, WANSKUK SERGES—and tell me to hold the garments for 4, 8, or 10 weeks or till you are ready.

THE MEDAL OF HONOR

Royal Victoria Decoration for Boston Man

BOSTON, Feb. 9.—For distinguished services to horticulture, the Royal Horticultural society of Great Britain has awarded E. H. Wilson of the Arnold Arboretum the Victoria medal of honor.

At his home in Jamaica Plain Mr. Wilson has been notified of this action taken by the Royal society. For the past 11 years he has been connected with the Arboretum and during that time he has made two visits to China, circumnavigating the globe in his research for plants and trees which might prove useful and ornamental.

As a result of these trips, with their attending hardships, hundreds of valuable botanical additions have been made to the Arboretum, which have, in turn, been distributed, through the wide policy of its officials, throughout the United States and Europe.

THE RAILROADS

Said to be Issuing Free
Passes

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—The interstate commerce commission today ordered a general investigation of the practice of all interstate carriers with respect to the issuance of passes, tickets and free transportation service. Information has reached the commission that many carriers are violating the law in that regard. Indications are that the offending carriers may be obliged to face prosecution.

CHARLES W. MORSE

MAY SET, SAIL FOR EUROPE TOMORROW

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—Not a word could be obtained today at the apartments in West Fifty Eighth street where Charles W. Morse, whose prison sentence was commuted by President Taft, is recuperating preparatory to a trip to Bad Nauheim, Germany. Reports were current that Morse would sail away tomorrow perhaps on the Oceanic, having decided that it was just to start for Europe at once, instead of remaining here for a week or ten days as he at first proposed. Whether this report has any foundation could not be determined.

GUESTS OF THE C.Y.M.L.

Lawrence Young People Entertained in This City Last Night

The Catholic Young Men's Lyceum of St. Patrick's parish entertained the members of the Catholic Young Men's association of Lawrence and their lady friends at their well appointed rooms in Suffolk street last evening. There were about 200 guests from Lawrence present. About two weeks ago the members of the Lowell society went to the down river city and were royally entertained by the Lawrence society. Last night's affair was arranged to return the "compliment."

The visitors came to Lowell on a special train and arrived here about 8 o'clock. They were met at the depot by a delegation of the Lowell society and escorted to the latter's headquarters. Upon arrival at the club a reception was held, after which the real fun was started. A tournament of games was started and some interesting contests were played. When the Lowell contingent invaded Lawrence the result was a victory for the Lawrence young men. Last night, however, Lowell evened up matters and won by a close margin.

Last night's program included pool, billiards, cards and bowling. In pool, the teams made an even break, a representative of each society scoring a victory. In billiards Lawrence won but in pitch Lowell took three points to her opponent's two. In 45s, Lawrence took two points to one for Lowell, but in whilst the local representatives were credited with three points to one for the down-river men. The checkers, Lawrence scored two points and Lowell one. The bowling resulted in Lowell taking two strings and the total, thus taking the series by a few points.

The bowling at Les Miserables alleys resulted in a clean sweep for the visitors who were seemingly as much at home on the Lowell alleys as on their own. The scores were as follows:

C. Y. M. L.
E. St. Ives.....	73	77	79
C. Flynn.....	80	88	88
J. Murphy.....	83	83	84

Totals.....	468	472	487

While the tournament was in progress general dancing was started in the gymnasium and to the music of the Middlesex orchestra the evening was pleasantly passed by a majority in this way. An informal program of music was given during the evening by members of both societies. Refreshments were served at intermission.

It was after midnight when the affair was brought to a close, the visitors leaving by special train just before 1 o'clock.

The committee in charge of the evening's affair consisted of Albert Lavo, chairman; John McCarthy, John F. Murphy, Patrick J. Kelley, Michael Fleming, Patrick Harrington, Timothy Rohan and John Halloran.

The following program was given during the evening: Piano solo, Chas. Finnegan; reading, Kendall Weston; solo, Jas. Shugart; solo, Miss A. Kennedy; zither solo, John Hansen.

tenor solo, Jack Manchester; reading, Eugene Brown; song and stories, Charles Sturtevant; song, John Neeson; reading, Philip Carey of Lawrence.

MISS BLODGETT

GAVE RECITAL AT CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC

A delightful recital was given last night at the Lowell Conservatory of Music in Appleton street by Miss Marion Blodgett, a graduate of the conservatory, who is taking a post graduate course. Miss Blodgett who is a resident of Forge Village charmed her audience with her masterpieces which she played to great advantage. During the intermission refreshments were served.

The program which speaks for itself was as follows: Beethoven—Polonaise, Opus 53; Meyerbeer—Fantasie from Robert Lo Diabli; Rossini—Transcription, William Tell; Schubert—Sonata No. 2, Opus 53; Allegro, Vivace; Donizetti—Lucia de Lammermoor, selection; Chopin—Militaire Polonaise; Schumann—Trauerlied-Romanze; Liszt—Rhapsodie Hongroise, No. 2; Mendelssohn—(a) Lullaby, (b) Barcarole; Cramer—Romance Variee; Raff—Polka

Plan to Buy the Ancestral Home of the Washingtons In England

By CHARLES N. LURIE.

TO the American who looks upon Washington as the Father of His Country and to the Englishman who considers our George "the greatest Englishman of his time" (an English writer is quoted) the proposition to purchase Sulgrave manor by Americans should be a matter of much interest. The manor, in Northamptonshire, England, is the ancestral home of the Washington family. It is proposed to purchase it by popular subscription, in England and America—but mainly in this country, of course—and to maintain it in perpetuity as a memorial to the first president.

The movement to acquire Sulgrave manor from its present owners and make it a public trust is a part of the proposed celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of unbroken peace between England and America. The manor will stand, it is said, as "a visible monument to the cordial relations existing between the two great branches of the English speaking peoples."

Some doubt has been cast on the authenticity of Sulgrave manor as the genuine home of the Washington family, or, at any rate, of that branch of the family to which George Washington and his immediate relatives belonged. Efforts have been made to connect them with manors in other shires, but genealogists who have investigated the matter assert their complete belief in the genuineness of Sulgrave manor as the home of George Washington's ancestors. Corroborative evidence is found, of course, in the presence of the Washington arms over the door of the manor house, as well as elsewhere, and in the memorial brass (reproduced herewith), in the wall of the ancient manor church. The inscription reads: "Here lyeth buried ye bodyes of Laurence Washington, Gent & Anne his wyf by whom he had issue IIII sons & VII daughters. We [which] Laurence dyed ye day of anno 15 & Anne deceased the VI day of October anno dñi 1584."

The brass bears also the ancient arms of the Washington family, which were used by General Washington. They formed, it is said, the basis of the stars and stripes.

Description of the Estate. Sulgrave manor lies about seventy miles from London and just eight miles from Banbury Cross, the place made famous by the nursery rhyme as the destination of the cockhorse. The place was advertised for sale recently and was described as follows:

"A freehold, historically interesting manorial estate, including the lordship of the manor, with the rights, royalties, privileges and appurtenances thereto belonging and comprising in all about 200 acres. The estate is pleasantly situated within the postal district of and only eight miles from the town of Banbury. The ancient manor house, which was the authentic home of the Washington family (the lineal ancestors of General Washington, the American patriot), in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, is built chiefly of stone, is entered by a square porch, over and within which are antique carvings, including the Washington coat of arms, to which is ascribed the origin of the American flag. There is

1—Interior of Sulgrave manor church. 2—Old buildings at George Washington's birthplace. 3—Sulgrave manor house. 4—William de Herburn Washington. 5—Sulgrave church. 6—Mrs. Mary Bond Morosini and daughter. 7—Monument at Washington's birthplace. 8—Memorial brass in Sulgrave manor church. 9—Tombstone of Washington's father.

A large drawing room, once used by Queen Elizabeth.

Neither the father nor the grandfather of George Washington, Augustine and Lawrence by name, respectively, ever saw Sulgrave manor. The immortal George was the great-grandson of a Washington who came from England to Virginia in 1657. He was born in a humble house near Wakefield, Va., which contrasted strongly with the "substantial building of gray stone" back in Northamptonshire. The house itself has disappeared, but on the plantation are some very ancient little houses, or cottages, which are shown in the illustration.

According to Lessing's "Life of Washington," "the house in which George Washington was born was of a very modest appearance. It was the old homestead which the family had occupied for three-quarters of a century, with but four rooms and attics, a steep roof with overhanging eaves and a large chimney at each end. Not a vestige of it is now remaining, but the last surviving executor of his will has placed a stone where it stood, with an inscription of his name and the date of his birth." This was published in 1870. There is now a shaft, erected in 1905, to mark the spot of the birth of Washington, and the tombstone of his father, Augustine Washington, has been restored by a patriotic society. The shaft and the stone are shown in the accompanying pictures.

It is well known that there are many Washingtons of the present day, descended, of course, not from the Father of His Country, who left no children, but from his half brothers and full brothers and sisters. George Washington was the eldest of the four sons of Augustine Washington by Mary Ball, his second wife. There were also two daughters. By his first wife, who was named Jane Butler, Augustine Washington had four children, two of whom, Lawrence and Augustine, lived to maturity. The full brothers and sisters of George were named Betty, Samuel, John, Augustine, Charles and Mildred. There are descendants of these Washingtons, many of them with the same family name, now living in West Virginia, New York, Virginia and elsewhere. Some of them are known to the public as army and navy officers. One, William de Herburn Washington, whose face is seen in the picture, is an engineer, an inventor and an author of note. For the most part the Washingtons of today are undistinguished folk of good lives and manners.

It is asserted that William de Herburn Washington has in his veins more Washington blood than any other person now living. Mr. Washington does not, however, boast of that fact. In a recent letter he cites the interesting facts that he began his engineering career at the same spot, in the same month of the year and at the same age as did the Father of His Country, but says also:

"I am a good deal of a democrat and have been inclined to shun rather than seek publicity on account of my birth." Mr. Washington recently completed work on a book entitled "Progress and Prosperity," which purports to be a history of human progress. He resides in New York city.

Original Name of the Washingtons.

Mr. Washington bears as part of his patronymic the original name of the Washington family. Lessing's "Life of Washington" says: "The lineage of the family is traceable through 500 years to William de Herburn of the manor of Washington, or Wessington, in the county of Durham, in England. According to a custom which at that period obtained among Norman families of consideration de Herburn assumed as a surname the name of his estate."

Two other interesting Washington descendants whose pictures are seen in the illustration are Mrs. Mary Caroline Washington Bond Morosini and her little daughter of New York city. Mrs. Morosini was said some years ago to be the most beautiful young woman in the United States. She is a great-granddaughter of Samuel Washington, brother of George, and enjoys the added distinction of being a grandniece of Dolly Madison, the wife of the fourth president of the United States. Mrs. Morosini's husband is the son of the late Giovanni P. Morosini, who was a partner of Jay Gould.

SCENE IN PELICAN COLONY.

UNCLE SAM, bird protector! Just imagine the old man in the star spangled waistcoat and the striped trousers playing the role of sheltering guardian for the fowls of the air. It is not at all hard when you consider the numerous similar activities in which he has been engaged in recent years. If he can stretch his guardian arm over Cuba, Philippines, Puerto Rico, Guam, Hawaii and Samoa, why not over feathered Americans of North American extraction?

The report of the bureau of biological survey of the department of agriculture, recently issued, gives interesting details of the government's activities in protecting the birds. It tells, among other things, of Pelican Island, which is probably the best known of the places in which Washington keeps a watch over the birds under its care. Pelican Island lies in Indian river, not far from Sebastian, on the east coast of Florida. According to the government description, "Pelican Island is little more than a mud flat, with only a few black mangroves, one or two cabbage palms and large patches of grass to conceal its expanse of something less than four acres. For many years it has been the home of a large colony of pelicans, the only breeding ground of the species known on the east coast of Florida."

"Prior to 1901, when the state passed a comprehensive law protecting nongame birds, their nests and eggs, and the Audubon societies placed a warden in charge of the island, the colony was in danger of extermination. Poole hunters could easily destroy the birds for their quills, which were then in fashion as trimmings for ladies' hats, and egg collectors could carry away large numbers of eggs. One collector, who visited the island in April, 1894, records the fact that in about an hour he gathered some 125 sets, which must have represented a very considerable proportion of the eggs then in the nests."

"Even tourists often did considerable harm by shooting at the pelicans merely because they furnished an easy mark or drove them from their nests, thus exposing the young to the scorching, often fatal, rays of the sun. All this is now changed. For the last twelve years the birds have enjoyed the protection of the state law. In 1903 the island was made a government reservation by executive order and placed in charge of the department of agriculture, and the warden was duly commissioned as an officer of the department. For several seasons the birds have bred free from molestation, and the colony is now in flourishing condition. The island has been visited by naturalists, who have made careful studies of the birds. Data never before available are being collected regarding their food, molting and nesting habits, and the reservation is fast becoming a point of interest for visitors and students of nature, who are attracted by the exceptional opportunities afforded for observing the birds and studying their habits."

The report tells the story of a big adventure which befell the pelicans of Pelican Island reserve in October, 1910. The island was entirely submerged during a three day hurricane. Thousands of eggs were destroyed and fledgling pelicans drowned. The birds able to fly sought an adjacent island, too high to be submerged. When the sea quieted they all returned to Pelican Island, and by Dec. 15 the warden estimated there were 5,000 nests with eggs or young.

In its methods of nesting, feeding and caring for its young the pelican is one of the most interesting of birds. The photograph shows, among other things, how the little pelicans are fed. The young pelican is born naked. When it is about ten days old a downy plumage begins to appear, which soon changes the bird from black to snowy white. The brown flight plumage now begins to grow, showing first on the shoulders and humeri, and at the age of about two months this plumage is fully developed. The young are fed on predigested fish regurgitated (thrown back) by the old birds into the tips of the pouches. Later the young birds (sometimes two or three at once) eagerly thrust their heads into the parent's mouths and get their first fishes from the base of the pouches, where the food is stored for them. It is a funny sight. Possibly, suggests an authority on birds, in this habit of the pelican may be found the origin of the myth, European in origin, in which the parent pelican tears open her breast to supply nourishment for her young. This myth derives some of its verisimilitude from the fact that the tip or hook which terminates the long and strong bill of the pelican is red. The principal food of the pelican is fish. Sometimes when the young pelican obtains a fish longer than it can swallow it sits with the tail projecting from its mouth and waits patiently for the digestion of the head of the fish.

Near Dearborn, Mich., there is a tract of 2,600 acres which is being used for the protection of birds. There are several hundred bird boxes and a system of automatic feeding devices and shelters for use of the birds in winter. They are protected also as far as possible from their natural enemies.

Future of Kaiser's Daughter Interests Europe

WHENEVER news is scarce in Berlin, which is often, in spite of the frequency of the war scares in the German capital, some enterprising newspaper man (oh, yes, they have some very enterprising newspaper people there) starts a report that the Princess Victoria Louise is engaged. She has been reported engaged so often that nowadays few persons pay much attention to the report, thinking it like the cry of "Wolf!" in the old story.

The latest story has had it that the princess has been engaged to the hereditary grand duke Adolph Frederick George Ernest Albert Edward, only son and heir of the reigning grand duke of Mecklenburg-Strelitz. The young man is older than the princess, being in his thirtieth year, while she will not be twenty until next September. Otherwise the match has been considered a good one by the goings of Europe, for the family to which the grand duke belongs is high and mighty, very wealthy and very, very old.

Long ago the Kaiser was reported as saying that in one respect at least he resembled Themistocles, the ruler of ancient Athens, in that he is "bossed" by his daughter. Themistocles, it may be remembered, said that his young son was the real ruler of Athens, because, while the father was the nominal head of the government, he was ruled by his wife, and she in turn was governed by their son. So it is with the Kaiser, with this difference, that it is his daughter who bosses him, not any of his six sons. Any of those young men, from Crown Prince Wilhelm down to Prince Joachim, would have a fine time trying to tell the Kaiser what to do.

In addition to being the only daughter of the Kaiser and Kaiserin, Princess Victoria Louise is the youngest child of the family. She has always been the pet of her parents and her six brothers and is, naturally, somewhat spoiled. She has branched out considerably from the path of training to take care of the three Ke ("Kinder, kuche and kirche"—in English, children, kitchen and church) marked out for all good German housewives by her august father. However, her training in housewifely accomplishments has not been neglected by her mother, who has been for a long time to the women of Germany a shining example of the woman who "looketh well to the ways of her household and eateth not the bread of idleness."

In appearance the young princess is attractive, but not especially good looking. She is blond, with blue eyes, and is of medium height, resembling her father rather than the Kaiserin.

She dresses well now, of course, but in her early girlhood days she displayed an unusual dislike for trills which brought grief to the hearts of her governesses.

In her tastes Victoria Louise is said to be more English than German. This lent color to the report some time ago that she would be betrothed to the young Prince of Wales, heir of King George. There is a difference of almost two years in their ages, for the English prince will be eighteen in June, but this has not been considered an insuperable objection. The princess was one of the most popular of the foreign visitors to England during the coronation festivities.

The princess was quoted recently as saying:

MAN BLOWN TO PIECES

Main Building of Big Auto Station Wrecked by Explosion

MERIDEN, Conn., Feb. 8.—Adam J. Englehardt was blown to pieces and the main building of the Meriden Auto station which was owned by him and located on West Main street near the center of the city was wrecked this morning by an explosion of gas. Four large automobiles housed there were caught under the wreckage and very badly damaged if not ruined. Windows in nearby buildings were shattered and the shock was felt for half a mile around. The explosion occurred while Englehardt was testing a newly installed welding machine.

MUNICIPAL COUNCIL

Continued

Yesterday Afternoon's Session

At yesterday afternoon's session of the council, Com. Cummings speaking about the race street engine house said, that because it had not been finished and turned over to last year's city council, he, as commissioner of public buildings, had been presented a bill for $4,000. Mr. Cummings said there was a dispute between the contractor and the inspector of buildings relative to the time of contract, the inspector claiming that the contractor overran his time 21 days and that the contract says he shall pay a fine of $10 a day for each and every day that he has exceeded the time specified. The contractor, Mr. Towhey, on the other hand states that he completed the contract with 26 days to spare and that the city owes him for inside work. Contractor Towhey was present and said he was willing to waive his claim of the city would do the same. The matter was allowed to rest temporarily.

Mr. Cummings said he would like have a special draft drawn in order that the contractor might be paid.

Department Estimates

At 2:30 o'clock printed copies of department estimates for 1912 were handed the members and the first to receive attention was the school department. This department asks for $420,000. The committee asks for $1,200.35, for teachers, more than last year, in anticipation of the employment of additional teachers. It was stated that the total estimates for the year totaled $1,757,711.05, and for the most the city can appropriate is $1,394,574.17, the estimated revenue.

It was stated that from the amount of estimated revenues, $1,324,574.17 must be taken $25,000 for overruns, or to cover uncollected taxes and abatements.

Before proceeding to a discussion of

"I don't believe in starting on the children of the city of Lowell. The school is the poor man's as well as the rich man's institution and we must stand by it."

Alderman Brown—"I don't want to be put in any false light. We have to cut $134,000 and we will have to strike a basis. I do not want to strip the education of the children and I do not want to cut the pay of teachers. I will withdraw my motion."

Mayor O'Donnell suggested that Alderman Barrett did not seem to quite understand the motion put by Alderman Brown. He said it was for the purpose of making a start in order that the council might not sit idle during the afternoon.

Mr. Barrett resented, to a degree the suggestion of "idleness" and allowed right out loud, that he had been a lively and active member of the council since the first of the year.

Alderman Barrett then moved that the sum of $400,000 be appropriated for schools. Mr. Cummings seconded the motion and it became a vote.

The city auditor had been sent for to pass upon the race street engine house matter, as to the city's rights or the contractor's rights relative to the waiting of rights. Mr. Hennessy viewed the contract and its various clauses and arrived at the bona of contention, the number of days occupied in the construction of the building.

Mr. Hennessy said it was a matter that could be justly equitably and honestly settled by the municipal council upon recommendation of the commissioner of public buildings, Mr. Cummings.

Alderman Barrett moved that the matter be referred to Alderman Cummings with full power to act.

Mayor O'Donnell was somewhat surprised to the motion. He said he would prefer to have the matter referred to the commissioner of public buildings and have him report back to the

The estimates, of course, will not look the same when the municipal council gets through with them, and some loud hollering is expected. The biggest increase asked for is by the street department. That department spent $214,938.09 last year, and $257,000.00 is asked for this year, an increase of over $42,000.

ment for the year was $2,630.00, and it was granted.

Messenger's department

"The council took a recess of ten minutes and resumed operations on the estimates at 1:40 o'clock."

On suggestion of Alderman Cummings the city messenger's department was again into and Mr. Cummings took occasion to remark that one woman had been added to the force and the weekly wage of the charwomen remained the same.

"If so be," said Mr. Cummings, "because of a statement that has been made to the effect that the wages of these women have been increased. The remark, I presume, was made to annoy poor women who are working for a living."

"That is what some might call a joke, I suppose," remarked Mr. Cummings.

"Alas in the nature of a hostile criticism," amended the mayor.

Question of Lighting

The question of lighting the city hall was referred to and Alderman Barrett said that he was given the authority he would light the building for less than half of what it is costing at the present time. He said the water department could very readily generate light for the city hall.

It was at this point that Mayor O'Donnell said that he was diametrically and otherwise opposed to the methods of former city governments giving everything for nothing to public service corporations. "They get rights in our streets without giving us a cent for the use of them, and we ought to go on record as being opposed to this method of doing business."

Alderman Barrett was of the same opinion and he enlarged upon the public service question by stating his experience at a meeting before a legislative committee at the city house yesterday. He said that the city or the individual, in his estimation, were not given a very good show by the average legislative committee.

The council finally got back to the question of public lighting and discussion was general.

Alderman Cummings wanted to know from his colleagues what they would do if a petition was presented for poles for wires in the outskirts. He asked if they would vote for or against it.

Mayor O'Donnell said he would vote against it. "I know," he said, "it might work a hardship to the individual, but it is up to us to make a beginning. There are men of athletic tastes who are on committees having to do with the city. They are not content with the first to ask for permission to locate poles in our avenues, highways and streets."

Mr. Cummings' Department

After a somewhat lengthy discussion that was more or less educational the council switched back to Mayor O'Donnell's "Mr. Cummings' trouble."

The city messenger's department was again taken up and on motion of Alderman Cummings it was voted to recommend the sum of $15,620 for that department.

Street Department

On motion of the commissioner of streets, the council took up the street department. He asked for $257,000 for streets. He said that $200,000 of that amount was for sidewalks and as that was a permanent improvement he thought the amount could very properly be borrowed.

If the council didn't want to consider the $200,000 at this time, he said, he would be willing to have the sum of $250,000 considered. He said that the increase because of the department had increased in wages. He said it was his intention to pay greater attention to the care of the streets, sweeping, flushing, etc., and he did not see how he could get along on less than $250,000.

A Little Squall

"How much was the appropriation for the street department, last year?" asked Mr. Barrett.

"$134,000," answered the auditor.

"And where does the difference between that amount and $257,000 come from?" asked Mr. Barrett.

"Mr. Barrett," said the auditor, "I am talking, and I have the floor," said Mr. Barrett.

"My question has not been answered" and I am looking for information. I don't propose to be choked off by you or anybody else," said Mr. Barrett.

"I intend to have my rights here," said Mr. Barrett.

"No need of any disturbance," cautioned the mayor.

"I have the floor," said Mr. Barrett.

"Mr. Barrett asked for information before you took the floor," said the mayor, "and I will have to rule you out of order."

Eight Hour Law

Mr. Cummings had asked how much more it cost last year on account of the eight hour law and Mr. Barrett replied about $4,000. He said he has 227 men at work and that is about the average for the year around.

"We are going to be criticized very harshly," said the mayor, "the amount of money we have to spend this year is less than in former years. It is unnecessary to state that every one of us would like to give work to the men who have no work, but we have a plain duty before us and we must have the courage to face it."

"Appreciating the fact that I will be criticized, I feel that I am talking fairly now and I say that our streets have not been extended to the extent that would warrant the increase you ask for."

"It is a splendid thing to have extra gangs on the streets and keep them clean and to have our streets beautifully lighted. These are things that we would like to have but we must deny ourselves the things we cannot afford."

"Each and every one of us must help each other. I am sure that we all desire to give the city a good business administration and in order to do that we must not indulge in political grand plays."

"If you mean that for me I won't stand for it," said Mr. Barrett. "That has been my attitude."

"Not caring to enter into any controversy," said the mayor, "I think that has been your attitude since the beginning of the year."

You and Alderman Barrett engaged in a two-hour talk this afternoon that was nothing more or less than a political play," remarked Mr. Barrett.

"Didn't you enjoy it?"

"Yes, I enjoyed it to the extent that I know everybody was on their feet," replied Mr. Barrett. There was some further parrying of words and vigils of Alderman Barrett the council adjourned to 10 o'clock this forenoon.

BASEBALL NOTES

From now until the season opens the real dope on the baseball situation will be coming. Yesterday an article on the Lowell team was printed in the Boston Globe and it was a good one. It was about the New England league from a local standpoint. Today notes from the big fellows are appended.

Freddie Parent is too busy fishing through the ice at his home in Sanford, Me., to bother signing the contract sent him by President Dunn of the Baltimore club. Freddie is some boy in Sanford. If visiting there, the first place the sightseers are shown is the home of Parent. His home on postal cards are for sale in all the stores there.

With the exception of John Stahl, all of the 15 managers in major league clubs were star players in the National league at some time.

The Chicago White Sox will send an advance guard with Manager Colahhan to the training camp at Yonkers, N. Y., Feb. 20. March 5th the club will split into two squads and play 14 games before the players reach Chicago on April 11th.

Infielder J. H. Barker, who played with Albany, Ga., in the South Atlantic league last season, has been signed by the Detroit American baseball club.

The Chicago White Sox are having hard luck in securing a good lineup. Comiskey has been forced to experiment with an army of players since he won the pennant and world's championship in 1903.

Frank Chance's record as leader embraces four years out of six starts; Jennings, three out of five starts; McGraw, three out of nine starts; (with Giants); Mack, four out of 12 starts; Clark, four out of 12 starts (since 1900).

It was announced at Spokane, Wash., yesterday, that Leonard, the sensational young pitcher, has been leased to the Spokane club of the Northwestern league by the Philadelphia Americans in exchange for Pitchers Bonnier and Bonner.

Manager Colahhan of the Chicago American League baseball club, has purchased Jules Fournier, a utility infielder, from the Boston American League club. Fournier will probably be tried out at second base, the big hole in Colahhan's infield. The recruit had been in the Western Canadian league in batting last year with .317 in 109 games.

Philly fans say that Eddie Collins will gradually creep into the position held by Harry Davis, that of confidential adviser to Connie Mack. Collins is an intelligent player, studying the game from all angles all the time, and is credited with instituting many of the plays in use by the world's champions. Mack will doubtless make Eddie his lieutenant next season.

The New York National league club purchased Pitcher George T. Pierce from the Mobile club of the Southern association. Pierce is a giant left-hander and was once with the Boston Red Sox. Manager McGraw also announced he had signed Wild Baseman Frank P. Nowohl, a former star of Columbia university. Nowohl was a team mate of Eddie Collins at Columbia in 1905-6-7.

Paul Strand, the recruit twirler of the Boston Red Sox, bids fair to be the youngest player in big league baseball this season. This lad, who stands six feet and one-half inch in his Sox and weighs 150, is but 17 years old. He won five and lost nine games for the Spokane club of the Northwestern league in 1911, and so impressed the Red Sox scout that he signed him immediately, paying the minor league club a fancy price for him. Strand is a southpaw, but bats on the right side of the platter.

Jim Delahanty, second baseman of Detroit Tigers, may become a member of the Cleveland police force. He can become a member if he desires to, for in the examination conducted by the civil service commissioners recently, Jim passed with high honors, according to official announcement. There were 400 applicants for positions on the force. Of the 118 passed the physical examination, and of these Delahanty ranked sixth in the mental examination, being far above the average.

With the departure of Peterson from Providence, Manager Lake will have an entirely new corps of backstops for the coming race, the four new on the team being Schmidt, Beckendorf, Reynolds and Deals. Manager Lake said he will carry three catchers, although he plans to distribute the work about evenly between Schmidt and Beckendorf. In all probability, it will be Schmidt, however, who will do the bulk of the receiving on account of his great sitting ability. The fight for third-string catcher should be a warm one, as both Reynolds and Deals come highly recommended.

"Kid" Harrington was in Lynn the other day and said that he has not signed with Louisville because that club did not give him a sufficient increase. Reports have been out recently that Harrington had signed with Chicago, but he himself says not. He would like to go back to Lynn for another season and no one can say that he will not. Harrington does not want to play with any other club but Lynn should be set back for another season to the minors.—Exchange.

Jack Kleiman, the former Red Sox catcher, who purchased his release last season, has been signed by the Baltimore team in the International league.

Manager John H. O'Brien of the Fall River club, has signed Outfielder William Wright of Jacksonville, N. C., and Outfielder H. Lindholm of Falconer, N. Y.

Frank Baker's best salary is said to make him one of the highest paid men on Connie Mack's team.

The Giants so enjoyed the business of making money that they rendered him the old war horse to take them to Cuba, Japan or any old place next fall.

Marty O'Toole, the moist-ball artist, whom Pittsburgh gave up for $25,000 last season, looks to be in good luck. He has been bowling considerably and is satisfied that he will have no trouble with his arm next spring.

Even if Cather Bill Carrigan's broken leg keeps him out of the Red Sox lineup, the late coming on to Boston fans feel certain that the Red Sox will be able to go along well enough with Nunnemaker and Williams. Nunnemaker's smooth work last season was noted all over the circuit.

Nothing better illustrates the importance of the catcher in the scheme of baseball than the fact that so many catchers develop into team managers. In the major leagues six of the 16 managers are, or have been, catchers; while in the minor leagues catcher-managers are numerous.

Much of Charley Wagner's bad work last year was laid to the uncertain way in which first base was covered for the Red Sox and with Jack Stahl to take his throw Wagner expects to make a cleaner record. A first baseman has to take a good many bad throws from Wagner.

Gus Getz, the small fellow who played with the Boston Nationals a part of last season and is now with the Indianapolis team in the American association, may be released to the Springfield club in the Ohio State league. While with Boston he played a good game, and it was expected that with another season in the minors he would be right back in the big show.

BOTH ARE READY

Moriarty and Quill to

Meet Tonight

The members of the Lowell Social and Athletic club will be entertained tonight with one of the best programs that was ever arranged by the management. Billy Gardner, the matchmaker, has adopted a system by which all matches made show up or lose a forfeit. This step was taken owing to the several disappointments of the past. It is expected that this will insure the appearance of all. In tonight's main event Jimmy Moriarty of Lowell will appear against Tommy Quill of Brockton. Both men are in the pink of condition and their meeting will undoubtedly be one of the best ever seen here. The semi-final of eight rounds between Young Hunter of Pawtucket and Kid Reardon of Brockton is also a very classy card. This pair of performers are very proficient in the art of self defense and as both are anxious to win the verdict, a star bout is promised. The opening number is also a very classy number and will present Joe Hennessy of Newton and Kid Brown of Lowell. These boys are coming along at a fast clip and their number should be a highlight. The meeting will be held in Matthew Hall and will be called to order at 8:15.

But the Shock Did Not

Prove Fatal

PITTSFIELD, Feb. 8.—Joseph Cull, formerly of Lynn, now living on Woodlaw avenue, this city, employed in a transformer test department at the General Electric plant is in the hospital today as the result of a marvelous escape from electrocution. Cull, while at work, picked up with both hands a live wire, containing 30,000 volts of electricity.

His hands were carefully burned, but it is thought that the use of them can be saved. For some unknown reason the electricity did not go through his body, and in that way his life was saved.

SEN. BARLOW'S BILL

May be Reported by the Committee

A hearing was given at the state house yesterday on Sen. Barlow's stock transfer bill.

Senator Barlow and Charles Andrews spoke in favor of the measure and it was opposed by a representative of the stock brokers. It is said that the committee on taxation will report the bill and that it will pass.

The tax commissioner says it will mean an increase of from $500,000 and $1,000,000 in the state's revenues.

Leaves to Withdraw

The committee on education of the legislature acting as a school vocational education presented by John Jacob Rogers of this city, yesterday reported leave to withdraw.

SLICK PROFESSOR

Victimizing Families and Leaving Bills Unpaid

At least two families in this city have recently been victimized by a slick young man who poses as a professor of music and carries a large music roll in which he has many selections and one book marked "Studies Musicales."

In the Highlands he secured rooms and board from an aged couple who lived alone and had rooms to let. They were much pleased to get a professor of music as a boarder at their house. They were very particular to have his meals on time and to provide everything he called for. He was not particularly as to the terms, hinting that such matters were of little importance to him. He offered to pay a liberal rent for the room and was also willing to pay a good price for his board. Although from the fact that he was a musician the aged couple were delighted to have him in their home.

Everything went well for the first week and then disappointment came to the professor. He rendered him unable to pay his board at the usual time. So much was he inconvenienced that he solicited the loan of a small amount from his landlady which, however, she was unable to furnish at the time. He did not then suspect him of dishonesty, but the following Sunday he disappeared and did not return.

He next showed up at 101 Third street, Centralville. There he rented the front chamber on the second floor but he had his meals elsewhere. He sojourned there but three days when he solicited a loan from the landlady, who lent him a small amount, but he did not return the account of some unexpected delay, which came upon him while he was waiting for a check. He wisely declined to accommodate him. He sometimes came home as late as two o'clock in the morning and now that he has vanished without leaving his room rent, the landlady thinks that he is something the matter with him. Perhaps there was.

This professor was about five feet ten inches in height, had light complexion and was of florid complexion and was about 30 years old. He wore a light suit and a grey mind overcoat. He is a smooth talker and can play the role of music teacher to perfection. He has a peculiar tooth in the upper jaw in front and seemed to have lost a couple of teeth either on the right or the left side, the landlady does not remember which.

He should have a few nights at the police station.

BOARD OF TRADE

Received More Propositions for Membership

The second weekly meeting of the members of the five teams appointed to boost the membership of the Lowell board of trade to 1000, was held at the New American Hotel on noon yesterday and after an excellent meal had been discussed the captains of the various teams reported and it was found that 23 people had signified their intention of joining the ranks of the hustling organization.

Last week 15 propositions were received and inasmuch as the number of propositions received during the present week is almost double that of last week there is little doubt that the 1000 mark will soon be reached.

Capt. Henry Penabaz's team reported that nine propositions had been received. Capt. Abel R. Campbell's team secured the names of seven men who signified their intention of joining the ranks, and Captains H. Hutchins Parker and John F. Murphy stated that each had secured six new names.

FUNERALS

MCCARTHY.—The funeral of the late James Edward McCarthy, aged 40 years, took place yesterday at 2:30 o'clock at the home of Mrs. E. A. Chamber, 66 West street. Rev. Mr. Hathaway of Philadelphia officiated. Burial was in West Lawn cemetery. The bearers were cousins of deceased. Friends attending the funeral. Deceased is survived by a sister, Mrs. Joseph Whitaker of Philadelphia; a mother and four sisters in England.

GAS METER EXPLODED

Three Fire Chiefs and Three Firemen Overcome at New York

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—Deputy Fire Chief Blinn, Battalion Chief Marshall and three firemen were overcome by gas while fighting flames in the sub-cellar of a building occupied by the Staats Zeitung on William street early today. A gas meter exploded and the cellar was quickly filled with gas fumes. The three chiefs were the first to fall from the effects of the gas and they were carried unconscious to the street. Three other firemen were also overcome but were rescued. The firemen recovered from the effects of the gas. The fire was extinguished after an hour's work. The damage was small.

PASTOR MISSING

He Started Out to Fill Pulpit Engagement

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 8.—Mystery surrounds the disappearance of Rev. Lewis Fuller, a member of the Ohio conference of the Methodist Episcopal church who has been strangely missing since last Friday night, when he started from Gallopville to Bluffville, a nearby village, to fill a pulpity engagement.

ALLEN IS DYING

Rich Man Married 20 Year Old Girl

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—Elisha M. Allen, a rich 44-year-old lumber exporter, who attracted public notice a month ago by his marriage to Miss Mattie Walker, 20 years old, was reported today as dying.

MEMBERS OF BASEBALL RULES COMMITTEE WHO WILL TRY TO STRAIGHTEN OUT PLAY

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—The rules of baseball will be a bone of contention when the major league committees meet here Feb. 13. There is already a difference of opinion between the two chairmen, John M. Ward for the National and Tommy Connolly for the American. The difference of opinion is about a play which occurred in Boston last season. With one out and a runner at first the batsman hit for a home run. The ball was thrown to the catcher, who touched out the man who had evidently scored from first base. The umpire called both runners out on the ground that the runner from first had failed to touch second base and that the batsman was out for following the runner in who had failed to touch one of the bases. Mr. Ward and President Lynch decided that the umpire was right in declaring both runners out. Mr. Connolly says the batsman should be allowed to score, for he was in no way responsible for the runner ahead of him not touching the bases in order.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES
Tomorrow the local Y. M. C. A. basketball team will play the William Road five of Boston.
At the meeting of the G. C. Together club this evening at 6.30 o'clock John A. Rogers, Esq., will be the speaker. Mr. Rogers will talk on his trip to Russia.

At 8 o'clock the grand march was a mass of beautiful decorations and the orchestra was placed amid potted plants of all descriptions, and when all the lights were turned on the sight was a most pleasing one. The orchestra was in attendance and from 8.30 till 9 it rendered the following concert numbers: March, Nomin, Ithareth, cornet, trombone, duct, "The Garden of My Heart," Messrs. Buckley and Callahan; Mountain Idol, Sleepy Hollow, by Allen.

PLEASANT HOUR CLUB

Held Annual Concert and Ball

O. U. A. M. in Middle street was the scene of a pretty gathering last night, the occasion being the second annual concert and ball by the Pleasant Hour club. The attendance numbered about 150 couples, the men wearing evening dress, while the fair sex was attired in rich and handsome gowns. The decorations were splendid and a fine dancing program of 30 numbers was executed in a very pleasing manner, while the grand march was a pretty feature of the evening. All in all the affair was very successful in every point and a pleasant evening was spent by the elite of the French speaking people of this city.

The hall was artistically decorated, the dominating colors being purple and white with long streamers of the same colors extending from all corners of the hall to the centre chandelier. The Desrosiers, Mr. Joseph Miller and Miss Anna Bourassa, Mr. George Gagnon and Miss Lucie Drouin of St. Johnsbury, Vt., Mr. Omer Savigneau and Miss Lena Theriault, Mr. Ezeas Hebert and Miss Antoinette Dupuis, Mr. Ernest Landry and Miss Graciele Dupuis, Mr. Joseph Burns and Miss Blanche Alexander, Mr. and Mrs. Fred L. Dubois, Mr. Antonio Trudeau and Miss Corine Alexander, and many others.

This part of the program was very enjoyable for both the participants and the spectators and the evolutions were gone through with ease and perfection.

During intermission refreshments were served, and the rest of the program was carried out in a satisfactory manner.

The officers of the evening were: Hector Dupuis, general manager; Aubin Belanger, assistant general manager; Hermas Michaud, floor director; Arthur Pellerin, assistant floor director; and Rodolphe Dupuis, secretary.

PHOTOGRAPHER SAILING IN AIRSHIP HIGH IN THE AIR MAKES PICTURES

PHOTOGRAPHER DUFF IN HIS SEAT

GODDESS OF LIBERTY FROM HYDROAEROPLANE
COPYRIGHT 1911 BY AMERICAN PRESS ASSOCIATION

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—Adrian C. Aviator Frank Coffyn handled the by Duff, a photographer for the American Press association, has the distinction of being the first man to make pictures of the New York harbor from an airship. Incidentally he proved that in time of war a photographer with a camera could fly over fortifications and make photographs that would show in detail the inside of fortresses, their armament and other valuable facts, craft, which was resting like a gull on

"I have always been subject to neuralgia and have suffered from it for years. While visiting my son and suffering from one of the old attacks, he brought me a box of Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills. I used them as directed and after taking them it was the first time in years the neuralgia ceased from the use of medicine." MRS. R. C. HOWARD, 433 Grosse St., Dowagiac, Mich.

At all drug stores. 25 doses 25c. A. MILES MEDICAL CO., Elkhart, Ind.

In the air and above the statue of Liberty, the front end of the pontoons under the airship is shown at the lower side of the picture, while at the upper left corner is one of the wire braces of the airship. "There is no question," said Mr. Duff after his flight, "that a man with a camera in a flying machine could take pictures of any fortification in the world, even to their finest details. Of course, I was new at it, or I could have produced much better results than I got today. I had only a small hand camera, and the fact that some of my plates did not come out well was due merely to the unsteadiness of the camera as I held it. The only bracing I could do was to hold it against my chest. Besides, there was no special arrangement about my camera. I simply focussed it at 100 feet and had to aim it pretty blindly. But the next time, with a camera strapped tightly to my body, against my chest, I could aim it with absolute certainty, using my hands to cling to the side rails and steady my body. I'll admit I was a little surprised to see what was on my plates. In the rush of the machine and the stir of the air in my eyes I saw only about half what the camera clearly observed and reproduced."

LOWELL OPERA HOUSE

Cohan and Harris' company presenting "The Fortune Hunter." Winchell Smith's charming comedy of rural life will be the attraction at the Opera House, Feb. 15-16-17 with Saturday matinee.

That a playwright of these modern days need not resort to salaciousness to attract the patronage of amusement seekers has been most convincingly demonstrated in the popularity of this charming comedy with its consistent appeal for the uplifting of the morals of the youth of today, and that

SCENE IN "THE FORTUNE HUNTER"

Winchell Smith, its author, has provided such a clean, wholesome play and filled it with lines that contain as profitable a sermon as was ever delivered from a pulpit; surrounded it with an atmosphere of joyous mirth, and punctuated it with broad comedy situations, that while never offending make a strenuous demand for laughter. It is a tribute being paid by thousands of playgoers, and a lesson to his contemporaries who desire to have their name enrolled on the scroll of successful dramatists. "The Fortune Hunter," points the way. It is a wonderfully clever comedy, constructed along perfect lines, and as an example of plays construction has few equals and no superiors on the American stage.

KEITH'S LOWELL THEATRE

Theo, the charming ballroomist, continues to delight large audiences with her unusual aerial act, in which she circulates through the theatre over the heads of the audience in her miniature balloon with no visible means of locomotion. She also concludes her act with singing and dancing with her "Dandies" and a most charming stage setting. Alfredo, the vagabond violinist is the most talked-of musician that has come to Lowell in a long time. He gets a marvellously pure tone from the violin and whether playing the classical compositions or ragtime or in his imitations the touch of the artist is readily apparent. One need not be a lover of music to become enthralled by the power of this young prodigy. Haviland and Thornton, the elongated insurance agent and the charming grass widow in their seaside setting give one of the funniest sketches seen here in many moons. Their wit and repartee is rapid-fire and sparkling while their songs are all new and catchy. Josh Dale, the Alabama kid, sings original parodies that are up and coming. Willard and Bond, and their horse have a screamingly funny offering entitled "The Battle of Bullock Hill." Rosalie and Doretto, the acrobatic clowns do break-neck stunts in a most laughable manner. Frank and True Rice, are head-to-head balancers and talking tumblers. Hart and Donlay in "After 20 Years," present an act combining sentiment and humor.

MERRIMACK SQUARE THEATRE

The photo-plays for the last three days of the week at the Merrimack Square theatre are among the very best produced in many months. Modern pictures of the home-coming celebration of Cardinal O'Connell at Boston a week ago are especially interesting. They show the numerous interesting events in connection with the occasion in which many Lowell people took an active part. It shows the entrance of the steamer Canopic into Boston harbor, the landing of the cardinal and the parade through the streets of Boston.

The presentation of the delightful Irish singing playlet, "The Bride of Garry Owen," by the members of Our Stock company, is winning favorable recognition at all performances. Miss Jackson, and Mr. Weston are especially pleasing in their parts and the rest of the cast is adequate. The staging of the piece is exquisitely done.

Murphy and Willard give an amusing original sketch, and Crawford and Monrose are novel singers and dancers of merit. Miss Marie Laurens, a prima donna of recognized ability, is making a big hit in a repertoire of songs and stories. The views of Ireland, showing the various places of interest in the land of the shamrock is an added attraction. Tonight the Merrimack Square Theatre Concert orchestra will feature Andrew Macna favorite song, "The Beautiful Irish Rose."

Miss Salez, the eminent chirographist and oculist, is giving private interviews to all patrons who desire them during the week. Miss Salez will receive patrons tonight between the hours of 7:30 and 9:30 o'clock. Next week's bill will contain several well-known and high-class entertainers. Watch for the announcement Saturday.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC

Sold out again last night, and why not? With a great big show sparkling with comedy and a good seat at a low price the Academy is rapidly gaining the prestige that it has had in former years. The Bellmores, two local acrobats who have toured the whole country, open the show and their acrobatic work is very creditable. Ralston and Sam, a giant and a midget, make a whole lot of comedy, but the Hartford Stock company in "Dr. Quick," with Eddie La Rose as the colored brother, brings roars of laughter. His dread of the churchyard at the hour of twelve is ludicrously funny. Margaret McDonough's new song review is proving that there are a lot of singers in Lowell. Come up and test your voice.

A son was born Feb. 4, to Mr. and Mrs. Fred H. Peabody of 5 North street. Mrs. Peabody was formerly Miss Olive Bragden.

A SHARP WARNING

Nervous Exhaustion! Notice to Relieve the Strain and Build Up the Starved Nerves.

Nervous exhaustion, or breakdown of the nerves, is more often a blessing than anything else. The nerves have rebelled and you should be thankful it is no worse than it is. Let it serve as a sharp warning to relieve the strain and to take a treatment that will build up your nerves.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are a real nerve tonic. They supply plenty of nourishing red blood to the exhausted nerves and do not excite and urge them on to do work which they have already shown they cannot do. Medicine which whip on the tired nerves do more harm than no medicine at all. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People not only start in immediately to give relief but continue to strengthen the nerves until they are able to do their work once more.

Mrs. H. G. Williams, of No. 112 North Franklin street, Saginaw, Mich., says: "Nervousness in any case was doubtless due to worry and overwork. I merely felt tired out, weak, restless and nervous. Nervous spells came on me whenever I had any extra strain. There were no additional symptoms in my case but as I was conducting my store all alone and there was considerable detail connected with it, it is not to be wondered at that I was nervous. An old lady friend, who had used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People with good results in her family, told me to try them for nervousness. I did so. My nerves became steadier and I was cured. I can recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People as a splendid nerve tonic. I have used them for years whenever run down and found they gave me immediately relief."

People are guaranteed to be free from any harmful or habit-forming drugs. They have given the most gratifying results in nervous headaches, neuritis, nervous dyspepsia, "St. Vitus' dance," and even in partial paralysis and locomotor ataxia. For a full statement of this treatment write for the free booklet, "Diagnosis of the Nervous System." Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 25 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

AN IOWA FARMER

Who Aspires to be a Governor

AMES, Iowa, Feb. 9.—Professor Perry G. Holden of the Iowa Agricultural college is out after the republican the past seven years, while her husband has lived in Malden.

A day or two ago he received word from Tewksbury that his wife had passed away. Mr. Levine made arrangements to have the body taken to the Montvale cemetery and buried.

Yesterday Mr. Levine and his three children visited the grave to witness the burial of the wife and mother.

Mr. Levine raised the lid of the coffin just before it was lowered into the grave and was horrified to discover that the body was not that of his wife. He refused to have anything further to do with the burial.

Word was sent to Tewksbury, and it transpired that his wife was alive and there were other patients of the same name.

Changing Her Face (From the Household Friend.)

Any woman not satisfied with her complexion can remove it and have a new one. This thin veil of stifling half-dead cuticle is an encumbrance and should be removed to give the fresh, vigorous young skin underneath a chance to show itself and to breathe. There's a simple, old-fashioned home remedy which will always do the work. Get an ounce of pure mercurized wax from your druggist and apply it at night like cold cream, washing it off in the morning. The mercurized wax gently absorbs all the lifeless skin and leaves a healthy and beautiful complexion, as fresh as a child's. Naturally it takes with it all such facial blemishes as freckles, tan, moth patches, sallowness, liver spots, pimples, etc. It is pleasant to use, effective and economical. The face so treated immediately looks years younger.

WIFE STILL LIVING

Husband Thought That She Was Dead

BOSTON, February 9.—Abraham Levine, a shoemaker, who lives at 130 Bryant street, Malden, nearly buried another man's wife yesterday. At the edge of the grave he found his mourning premature. Believing his wife dead Levine closed his store, only to discover before the burial that the body was that of another woman. Mrs. Levine has been confined to the Danvers and Tewksbury hospitals for

ABDICATION OF THRONE

Will Come Before Feb. 18, Says Premier's Representative

SHANGHAI, China, Feb. 8.—Tan Shao Yi, the representative of Premier Yuan Shi Kai today declared that he was confident that the abdication of the throne would be an accomplished fact before Feb. 18. There appears to be less confidence now than there has hitherto been that Yuan Shi Kai will be selected for the presidency of the republic. On the other hand the name of General Li Yuan Hong, the present vice-president is mentioned and it is probable that he may be eventually selected.

The draft of the proposed magna charta of the new Chinese republic has been completed by Dr. Wu Ting Fang, the minister of justice in the republican cabinet and now awaits the approval of the senate at Nanking. The document provides for a presidential term of five years but the senate will probably make the first term only one year. It is thought that a compromise may be reached on the question of the future capital of China. President Sun Yat Sen asserts positively that Nanking will be selected, although he admits at the same time that an agreement may be made to keep Peking provisionally as the nominal capital.

Desultory fighting continues in many places but the reports as to the casualties are very much exaggerated on both sides. Tan Shao Yi today declared positively that there could be no more serious fighting.

RICH STORE OF LOOT

Was Found in Storage Warehouse

BOSTON, Feb. 8.—By the confiscation of several thousands of dollars' worth of goods at a South end storage warehouse and the arrest of two men yesterday the police believe they have solved the mystery of a wholesale plan of robbery from various merchants. Since last summer complaints have been coming in regularly to police headquarters from railroad and streetcar merchants that merchandise has been stolen from sidewalks in front of stores, freight houses and offices.

Inspectors Wolf, Rooney, McCauley and Sgt. Kilday of headquarters, after a week of investigation, yesterday arrested Joseph Miller, 28 years old, of 229 Columbia road, Dorchester, and Samuel Cohen, 37 years old, of 10 Stanwood street, Roxbury. Miller runs a ship chandler store on Atlantic avenue. Cohen is a tinsmith. He hires an express wagon at 24 Fleet street and has a stand at 181 Summer street.

After his arrest, Cohen said yesterday, according to the police, that Miller had turned over to him various boxes and cases to deliver at the High storage warehouse and leave in the name of J. Klein, or any other name he saw fit.

At the storage warehouse the police confiscated all the goods under the name of J. Klein. They declare that the list includes a consignment of 48 dozen horse bandages from Spear & Co., Brockton, N. Y., to Henry C. Storch & Co., 431 Federal street, Boston. Other goods seized by the police were 200 yards of ladies' dress cloth, white; 1000 black check; two cases containing 2000 yards of white muslin; one barrel of brass water faucets, 50 dozen; 30 dozen Roger Bros. silver spoons, marked with manufacturer's number 1847; 500 yards of duck canvas; 100 yards in two rolls of ladies' gray dress goods; 2000 yards 60 pieces of ladies' white edging.

The police have the goods under guard at the warehouse, and tomorrow will give merchants an opportunity to view the goods for identification.

More arrests are expected.

GREAT EXHIBITION

GIVEN AT THE MIDDLESEX CO. TRAINING SCHOOL

At the Middlesex county training school last evening the boys were treated to a great show, the performance taking the form of a circus. The For-Pay circus of the Pawtucketville Boy Scouts and the Bungling Brothers, namely Theodore Pearson, Walter Muzzey and Charles Barton were the entertainers. The program was of a great variety and the boys enjoyed from start to finish. It included a parade with horses, clown hand, animals in cages, chariots, autos, the Y. M. C. A. Junior leader corps, the For-Pay acrobats, under the leadership of William McLehrie, the North Chelmsford boy scouts, under the leadership of Scottmaster Kibard, and the big elephant at the end of the procession.

Breaks the Fetters That Bind Men

Hundreds Here Know It

Struck away from that allment or complex that unites you for business or pleasure. You cannot expect the fullest enjoyment of life if you are fettered to a dead end. Says an eminent physician, writing to a prominent business man in this city, "Break the fetters that bind you and you will find a new life today." "Choose carefully your food. Read carefully the following prescription be used regularly for several weeks or months and all such symptoms as these will vanish. Dull, sunken eyes; cold extremities; backache, headache, sleeplessness, thinness for over fat; weakness in the spine; twitching, spots before the eyes; pains in back of head; trembling, fatigue, despondency, impaired memory, loss of appetite, the dabbly muscles, shrinking skin, constipation, kidney disorders and a general restlessness and inability to do their best. For the benefit of those who want a restoration to full, bounding health and all the happiness that comes with it, the following home treatment is given. It contains no opiates or habit-forming drugs whatever. It is at home and no one will be the wiser as to your affliction. The treatment is simple, thorough and correct. Leading druggists supply the main ingredients, extracts and essences in one-ounce bottles, ready to mix. Get three ounces each of the following compound, mix with one ounce compound fluid balsam, and stand two hours. Add one ounce compound essence cards and one ounce tincture calomel. Shake well and take a tea-spoonful after each meal and one at bedtime.

Special work in "First aid to the injured" was given to the members of the circus as they very kindly broke their limbs in order that the North Chelmsford boys might show their skill in this line of work. The trained animals were especially good, and created no end of fun by their antics, as the thugmaster, Edward Sheridan, trained them. The Y. M. C. A. Junior leaders under the direction of Physical Director A. J. Wick, gave a fine exhibition of acrobatic work.

After the entertainment the boys gave the performers a dinner and Sgt. Corley on behalf of the boys congratulated the entertainers for their great work and thanked them for the magnificent program that they presented.

The Pawtucketville boys walked to the school and after the entertainment was over they also did a "Dan O'Leary" back to the city.

BAPTIST UNION

HELD REGULAR MEETING AT Y. W. C. A. ROOMS

The Lowell Baptist union held its regular February meeting and supper at the Y. W. C. A. rooms last night with the reception in Kitson hall and the supper served in the spacious dining hall, which, by the way, was not large enough to hold the number of diners present and an overflow supper was served at the Chinese restaurant. The meeting was a most enthusiastic one and was greatly appreciated by the members present. The meeting and reception in Kitson hall was featured by a most able talk by George W. Coleman of the Ford hall meetings in Boston. Mr. Coleman is a forcible speaker and by his connection with Ford hall, was able to present his subject in the most convincing and instructive manner, and his hearers were deeply impressed. The choir of the Paige Street Baptist church gave several selections in a most pleasing manner, the members being Miss Susan C. Griffin, Mrs. E. G. Russell, Harry Pascal and John H. Moss. Mr. Moss sang alone in his usual fine and melodious manner. The accompanist of the evening was Miss Ola M. Sargent.

President H. A. McCoy presided at the meeting and several new members were admitted to the union. Representatives were present from 19 churches of Lowell and vicinity.

SUITS FOR $42,000

HAVE BEEN ENTERED AGAINST SEVERAL RAILROADS

BOSTON, Feb. 8.—Suits aggregating $42,000 have been filed at Dedham with the clerk of the Norfolk county courts against railroad corporations, resulting from accidents.

Elmer P. Fletcher of Boston has entered suit against the Bay State street railway company for $20,000 for injuries received in a collision last May.

Miss Grace Elizabeth Young of Boston sued the Boston Elevated for $15,000. She claims that she was hurt by being thrown from a car at Brookline Nov. 7, 1911.

Walter Soren, Brockton, has brought suit to recover damages from the Boston Elevated for damages to his automobile in a collision at Coolidge's corner last December. Leo J. Johnson, who was riding with Soren, was killed and injured to his head, received, so he alleges, in the crash.

Forange Gasbarr, Boston, and Ernest D'Innocenzo, Boston, have sued the Boston Elevated for $200 each, for injuries alleged to have been received in collision with cars owned by the company.

LUNCHEON TO VISIT

BERLIN, Feb. 8.—The German emperor and empress today gave a luncheon at the Imperial palace in honor of Viscount Haldway, the British secretary of state for war. Among those invited to meet Viscount Haldway were Dr. Von Bethmann-Hollweg, the Imperial chancellor, Admiral Alfred von Tirpitz, the minister of marine, and General Josias von Heeringen, minister for war.

THE BROWNIES WON

Took Two Points from the Alpines

In one of the fastest games of the season the Brownies took three points from the Alpines in the City league series. The Brownies bowled two straight over the 500 mark and some of the best individual bowling of the year was seen.

In a game on the Brunswick alleys the Speed Boys won from the Tramps. The Pawtucket Blues took three points from the Druggists at the Moody Bridge alleys. Several other good games were also played.

A GENERAL STRIKE

To be Ordered in Chicago Next Week

CHICAGO, Feb. 8.—After a meeting of leaders of the street car men's union last night the following statement was given out:

"A general street railroad strike affecting both surface and elevated roads will be ordered in Chicago some time next week unless James B. Hogarth, superintendent of the Chicago Railways Co. is removed from the operating department."

President Roche of the Chicago Railways Co., who arrived in the city from Florida during the day, refused to make any statement until he had conferred with the men. It was learned that W. D. Mahon of the Amalgamated Association of Street Railway Employees had spent a week here conferring with members of the union.

LABOR LEADERS

Forming Organization of Railroad Employees

CHICAGO, Feb. 8.—Labor leaders are secretly perfecting the formation of a territorial organization of railroad employees that will include every railroad operating west of the Mississippi river, according to the Record Herald today. A meeting to place the finishing touches on the organization will be held in Kansas City, March 4th. As soon as the organization is launched demands are to be made for a general advance in wages on every road.

It is the aim to unite all the mechanical trades on one railroad, so that concerted action may be taken when wage demands are made. Demands will be made on all railroads in the same territory at the same time so that all railroads will be involved simultaneously if a strike is called.

ANNUAL REUNION

ST. JOSEPH'S COLLEGE "BOYS" ARRANGING FOR IT

Preparations for the first annual reunion of the former pupils of St. Joseph's college which is to be held in August of the present year are going along smoothly. Over 100 of the "boys" have already signed the list which is at Frederick Jodoin's optical parlors in Alken street, and a large number of new names is expected before Sunday.

I., pastor of St. Joseph's parish will be present and he has promised the young men he will give them his support in making the affair a grand success. ## SEEKS RELEASE

HARVARD GRADUATE IS CONFINED IN DANVERS

BOSTON, Feb. 8.—Clarence that his relatives are wrongfully keeping him confined in the Danvers Insane hospital, Samuel T. Crosswell, a graduate of Harvard and Harvard Law school, and author of several legal works, is seeking to obtain his release. Yesterday's hearing was continued to allow depositions from physicians who would examine Crosswell. The depositions will be presented at a later date.

There was some question as to the jurisdiction of the superior court in such cases and as to whether or not the action should have been brought in the supreme court. Crosswell is represented by W. D. Chapple of Salem, who was appointed by the court down and testified that after having been in a sanatorium, he was sent to Europe for a time by his brother. He told of his experiences in various sanatoriums and asylums in this country.

He charges that the commitment papers issued in 1907 by Judge Sears of the first district court at Salem were void, in that Crosswell was refused a hearing, although he had two experts to testify as to his mental condition. Yesterday's hearing was continued to allow depositions from physicians who would examine Crosswell. The depositions will be presented at a later date.

115 Pleasant St., Gloucester, Mass.—"About five years ago a rash began coming on my face and arm. It was itching and painful and would not go away. I tried everything I could find, but it would not go away. I tried Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I got one cake of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment. I washed the sores and put the Cuticura Ointment on it and soon it was entirely well and it never came back." (Signed) Miss Victoria Richardson, Nov. 16, 1911.

Never Had a Sore and Does Not Chafe.

Redondo Beach, Calif.—"I have always used Cuticura Soap and no other for my baby and he has never had a sore of any kind. He does not even chafe at his diapers. I feel that it is all owing to Cuticura Soap for he is fine and healthy, and when five months old went to a baby contest. It makes my heart ache to go into so many homes and see a sweet faced baby with the whole top of its head a solid mass of scurf, caused by the use of poor soap. # A PAGE OF FUN

USE FOR THE VALENTINE.

"I'll be glad when St. Valentine's day arrives."
"I didn't know you were sentimental."
"I'm not. I merely want some variation to break the monotony of the post-card habit."

Strictly Fireproof.

It is built of stone and iron.
The inspectors got five dollars each for passing it.
The reporters get the wink to write it up.
The tenants are assured that the Dames of Blazes couldn't even scorch it.
Then a heap of shavings are left in room No. 426.
Then a heap of newspapers in room No. 347.
Then there are 10 elevators to draw flames from floor to floor.
Then there are 154 waste paper baskets.
And as many wooden desks and double the number of chairs.
Then 30 wooden partitions are put in.
Then a restaurant in the basement.
Then a hundred boxes of matches are scattered around.
Then at least a hundred tenants smoke and throw away their burning cigar and cigarette butts.
Then —
Then there is a fire that roars through that fire-proof building, destroying everything and causing loss of life as well, and the owner can't for the life of him make out why it was struck by lightning and other buildings spared.

JOE KERR.

WHY NOT?

"Love, send me no sweet valentine.
I care not for the silly thing.
If it's thy wish to call me thine,
Why not produce a wedding ring?"

A CHANCE.

Are you going to send any valentines this year?
Yes, I'm not going to let the opportunity pass. Valentine poetry is the only kind you can send with any confidence that it won't be returned with thanks.

NO NONSENSE.

THE grey-haired wife and husband sat by the hearthstone thinking, and after a bit the wife looked up and said:
"Tomorrow is Valentine's Day again."
"Yum!" grunted the husband.
"Do you remember the first valentine you sent me?"
"Nunn!"
"It cost four dollars. There were six cupids flying among roses."

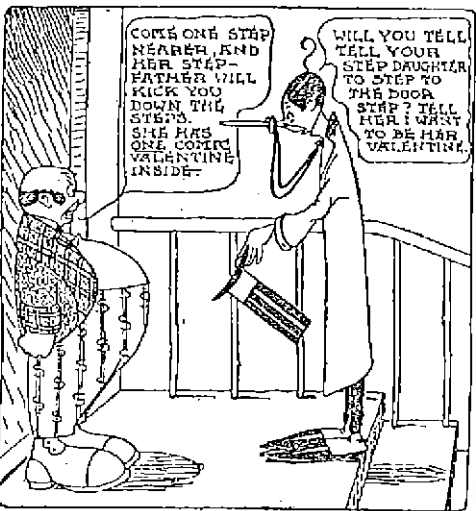

"Don't!"
"But, dear —"
"There, there—let's have no nonsense. Here's what you are edging around to. Take it and let me have my nap."
And he laid a nickel on her lap—a nickel all for herself, to do as she liked with—and in two minutes more was nodding his head in sleep.

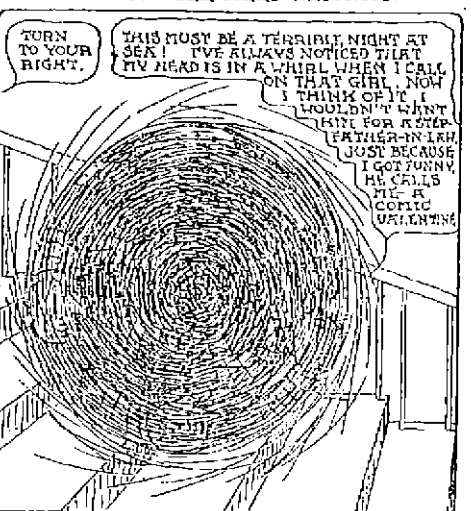

IT'S FINE AND DANDY OUT TODAY. I'LL GO TO SEE MY GIRL. PERHAPS SHE'LL BE MY VALENTINE. MY HEAD IS IN A WHIRL.

THAT SPOKE UP BEGGIE REAL TALKING. AS HE CLIMBED THE FLIGHTS OF STAIRS IT WAS A RIGHT OF MIND. HE SOON WILL NEED REPAIRS.

HE REACHED THE SIXTEENTH STORY. HIS STEP-PAPA MET HIM THERE. AND BROUGHT THE THRILLING STORY TO A CLIMAX. I DECLARE—

HE FELT THE FOOT OF HER STEP-PAPA. THEN HE FELT THE FOOT OF THE STAIRS. THESE FEET WERE MANY FEET APART AND WERE BY NO MEANS PAIRS.

HARD LUCK.

Tom—I sent the heiress a declaration of love as a valentine.
Dick—Did she keep it?
Tom—No; she sent it back, saying that she never accepted comic valentines.

SHAKESPEARE UNEQUAL TO IT.

I'm the man who writes the comic valentine.
Great Shakespeare's genius quite unequal mine.
While he wrote many a play,
He never saw the day
When he could write a comic valentine!

TIME TO SUELL OUT.

Say, Mr. Postman, I've been left on pretty valentines for three years now; so come across quick.

No Fool There.

IT was an oldish, cynical looking man and a young man with a frank, open face that sat opposite each other in the street car. They did more. They stared at each other for two long minutes, and it was the young man that finally said:
"Valentine Day is here."
"I know it," was the reply.
"And you think it a fool day?"
"I do."
"And you think I'm fool enough to be one of the fools?"
"I do for sure."
"That's where you are off your base."
"I hardly believe it. That seems to be a valentine you have there ready to mail."
"Yes? Well, look at it. Is it a five-dollar bill or a valentine?"
"Why, why, it's a bill."
"Bet your wad it is, and it's directed to my girl, and she'll get it in the morning and make it pay a noble skirt to meet me in when I call in the evening! That's the kind of a valentine I am, and have you any objections?"
And the oldish man said that if he got the time that day he would go off somewhere and drop dead.

LOVE LETTERS OF A SCHOOL BOY.

The grass is green, the sky is blue,
Honey is sweet, and so are you.
I feel all throbby when I see
You look across the room at me.
Oh, how I like to sit all day
And watch you while you teach away!
The rose is nice and sweet to smell;
My love for you no tongue can tell.
I wish that I was thirty-three,
For ma says that's what you must be.

SWEETHEART STRATEGY.

She lets me see each valentine—
It is her way to test one—
And as she asks which one was mine,
Of course, I pick the best one.

The Week's Fable.

A WOLF and a hyena met in the forest, and the wolf observed:
"I know of an old woman who lives all alone, and she'd make a good meal for both of us."
"That's good news. Where is it?"
"About a mile away. We can easily break into her cabin."
"Then let's be going. Hold on a moment. We might as well settle a few details. After I have eaten all I want—"
"Stop right there!" replied the wolf. "When I have had a square meal —"
"I don't agree to any such thing!"
"But don't be a hog!"
"And don't you be!"
"I discovered the old woman and am entitled to eat the biggest part of her."
"I was looking for her cabin when we met."
"Oh, you liar!"
"Ditto!"
There was a fight, and the fur was flying when the fox came up and said:
"Gentlemen, I have a bit of news for you. The old woman that lived in a cabin alone was buried yesterday, and you'll have to make dinner off of roots!"

INFORMATION.

"Pa, what is the 'great white plague' the papers talk about?" asked Willie.
"A big snowstorm, my son," answered his father, wearily resuming the task of trying to find his front sidewalk.
MORAL:
The Presidency is the old woman.

A COOL MEETING.

Pauline—I wasn't aware that you knew Mr. Jones. Where did you meet him?
Porcupine—Oh, I fell in with him while skating.

Try It Once.

A MAN got mad at another man,
A man who'd eloped with his wife;
And he swore to chase him a million miles,
Or until he'd taken his life.
He'd burn him at the burning stake,
He'd scalp him o'er and o'er;
He'd cut him into sausage meat,
And torture him galore.
But did he do those things to him,
Didst keep his word and vow?
He didn't, and you've got to know
The reason why and how.
Because he saw another way—
A way more fendish still;
A way that Satan pointed out
To work his fendish will.
A comic valentine he bought
And sent it on its way;
And holy smoke! but the effect
Was awful in its way!
The man that got it toppled o'er—
He cursed and raved and died;
The man that sent it grinned a grin,
And was quite satisfied.

THE ORDEAL.

Wayne—Good gracious, man, what's the matter with you? Out all night?
Payne—Nopes. Down town all the morning with my wife, selecting wall paper.
Wayne—Got it selected?
Payne—Nopes.

COURT CROWDED

The court room was crowded with members of the state and local police, militiamen, reporters, lawyers, witnesses and members of the strike committee. In all, there were fully 30 witnesses sworn by the prosecution and three of these were known to be hostile to the government's case. They were William D. Haywood, William B. Trautmann and Angelo Rocco. When Mr. Haywood entered, he shook hands with Mr. Trautmann and members of the strike committee. He was followed by Mr. Trautmann. They took seats in the spectators' row.

Atty. Mahoney was introduced to Etor and Giovanni. They chatted for a short while. Atty. Mahoney was only recently called into the case. While the court was in session, three guards were placed around the police station. They were detachment from Company A of Charlestown under command of Corporal William Wilson; detachment of Company I, under command of Corp. Ernest V. Davis; detachment of Company G, Woburn, under command of Corp. Joseph Mahan.

The government's case was presented by District Attorney Henry F. Atwill of Lynn. He was assisted by Capt. William H. Proctor of the state police. It was the latter who made out the complaints which brought about the arrest of the two defendants. Capt. Proctor was assisted in securing the evidence by the other members of the state police and also officials of the local department.

Atty. Mahoney addressed the court, after it was announced that the two defendants had pleaded guilty. Last week, and said to Judge J. J. Mahoney, who was presiding: "It may be late, but the district attorney should file a bill of complaint if he has any prepared. Now is the time to furnish there is no time, place or particulars in the bill and we should like such a one."

At the request of counsel for the defendants District Attorney Atwill gave a preliminary statement as to the commonwealth's case. In reviewing the strike the district attorney said the principle of the I. W. W. is social revolution and the destruction of the wage system of the country. He said they used violence and force to gain their end. District Attorney Atwill declared that upon arriving here Etor assumed direction and control of the strikers and on many occasions made inflammatory speeches to the strikers.

The first day under the new arrangement of hours was January 12. A number of operatives in certain mills went out on strike. The commonwealth was less than one-third of the operatives affected. The commonwealth will prove that among this number were many members of the Industrial Workers of the World, an organization that had a branch in Lawrence. The organization has for one of its officers Joseph J. Etor, one of the defendants at the bar. The headquarters and main office of the organization are located in Chicago. The purposes and principles of the Industrial Workers of the World are not in accordance with those of the ordinary trade unions of the country. These latter work for a betterment of wage conditions and a betterment of conditions under which they labor. One of the I. W. W. principles is social revolution and destruction of wage system in the country, that they teach as a method of conducting disputes between labor and employers, force and violence.

"As the methods to gain their ends as soon as strike has instituted, Joseph J. Etor, defendant at the bar, who makes his home in Brooklyn, N. Y., and who is one of the members of the executive committee of the Industrial Workers of the World, came to Lawrence. He arrived here January 14th. He assumed charge of the strike. Thereafter he assumed direction and control of the movements of the strikers and methods they pursued in carrying on the strike. On the Monday following noon collected, some being armed with dangerous weapons, and members of the mob made assaults on peaceful citizens, on certain mills, and the disturbances were of such great character that the police were unable to cope with them. Outside assistance came in. Policemen from other cities came to Lawrence. The militia was called out to quell the disturbances. The militia was needed to protect peace and quiet. That from January 15 to January 23, Joseph J. Etor, one of the defendants, on divers and many occasions made inflammatory speeches to strikers, that the defendant, Giovanni, assisted Etor and also made inflammatory speeches of the character that you or about January 23, Etor said something was going to happen, that within 48 hours Lawrence would not be very happy; that between the hours of 5 and 6 o'clock on the morning of January 23, mobs armed with clubs and dangerous weapons gathered on the public streets. Cars were stopped by strikers, windows were broken, assaults, property was destroyed. This demonstration continued for several hours; that in the mobs were defendants, Etor and Giovanni, and they directed the movements of the strikers.

"That at a meeting on the common after the demonstration, Etor and Giovanni advised and encouraged the strikers to go home, to go to sleep during the day time and to come out at night."

To Attack "Seabs"

"When it was dark, they said the strikers could break the heads of the workmen known as 'seabs' and then after a day or two, they could count the heads and they said they would not be on the heads of the strikers. These two, Etor and Giovanni, advised the strikers to act like wild animals, to growl around at night, fighting for blood. Etor and Giovanni advised the strikers not to throw live at the soldiers. They said the soldiers deserve punishing more than that. That evening, when it became dark, a crowd gathered on Common, Garden, and Union streets. They were armed with clubs and firearms. They assembled in groups. They beat peaceful workmen. Those in the discharge of their duties were prevented from doing so by this mob. They threatened to kill one of the police officers, Officer Bennett. They stabbed Bennett. A man of Italian birth discharged a revolver and the shot killed Anna Lopez.

The contention of the commonwealth is that the violence which occurred on January 15 and again on January 23 resulted from advice and counsel of the two defendants at the bar. Both defendants well knew when they gave counsel and advice that the result of that advice and counsel would be armed and that death and injury would follow in consequence of such advice and methods. That in substance presents the contention of the commonwealth.

He then dwelt on the fact of Jan. 23 and the murder of Anna Lopez on the evening of that day. According to the district attorney, on Jan. 23, Etor said something was going to happen within 48 hours. He then reviewed the riots of Jan. 23, holding that the defendants were responsible for the trouble because of their counsel to the strikers. The district attorney said that the bullet that killed Anna Lopez was fired by a tall Italian man. The bullet missed the officer but hit a fatal wound in the woman. District Attorney Atwill in concluding said that it was the contention of the commonwealth that the violence resulted from the advice and counsel of the defendants, they well knowing when they gave the counsel that many of their followers would be armed and that death and injury would be natural.

About 30 witnesses were sworn for the government.

Haywood Called
W. D. Haywood was the first witness called. He gave his name as Denver, Colo. Asked if he knew anything about an organization known as the Industrial Workers of the World, he refused to answer on the ground that he might incriminate himself. He said he had been associated with strikers and a woman, Etor, in the case and did not wish to say anything that might tend to prejudice their cases in the hands of a judge or jury. The question was withdrawn. District Attorney Atwill then handed him a letter and asked him if he had received it. Haywood refused to answer and was excused from the stand.

A Hostile Witness
Angelo Rocco, a high school student who said he was financial secretary of the local branches of the union, proved to be a hostile witness in the eyes of the government. Attempts to have him say that Etor was sent for or that Etor had even said that he was an officer of the union resulted in negative answers at first. When called to the stand later he admitted that a committee of the local union requested Etor to come here and take control of the situation. Rocco said that Etor came to Lawrence to keep the strikers peaceful and to do organizational work.

William Trautmann, formerly an official in the I. W. W., practically refused to testify and was excused. His acquaintance with Etor was testified to by Captain Barrett, a member of Col. Sweetser's staff. On cross-examination he said the strike leader always appeared gentlemanly.

Riots Described
The riots on the most serious day of the strike were described by Capt.

Strikers' children to parade in New York, Philadelphia and Washington.

No great gain in number of operatives at work today.

Attempt to end strike not yet successful.

LAWRENCE, Feb. 9.—Interest in the Lawrence strike today was transferred to the Lawrence police court where Eitor and Giovannitti, the strike leaders were arraigned. Practically no gain was made in the number of operatives returning to work, and the negotiations looking to a settlement of the strike made little progress.

The announcement that the strikers' children will be taken to New York, Philadelphia and Washington and that they will parade the streets of those cities excited much interest.

At a meeting today the Pacific mill print works employees met and voted to ask for a 45 per cent. increase in time and a half for overtime.

meeting under the auspices of the central labor union this morning the Pacific mill print works employees voted to demand a 45 per cent. increase in wages and time and a half for overtime after 1.30 p. m.

The meeting of the executive committee of the I. W. W. strike committee scheduled for this morning was interrupted by the fact that many members of the committee were either witnesses or spectators at the Eitor and Giovannitti trial in police court.

quarrel some time ago, according to the police, and about noon today they met near the corner of Hanover street and Hanover avenue. Sallmon pulled out a revolver and began firing and Nepolitano fell dead. Passersby shouted and some dashed into doorways while others chased Sallmon into a house and upstairs to the roof. Mr. Green was among the pursuers and reached the roof at the heels of the Italian. Although he did not know whether Sallmon had reloaded the revolver, he closed with him, overpowered him and wrested the revolver from his grasp.

HE KILLED A RAT
Grocer Had Hard Time Doing it

A very amusing scene was witnessed this morning in an upper Merrimack street grocery store, when the owner of the place armed with a slava paker had a little struggle with a large rat. The animal was trying to get in between flour bags, when it was suddenly caught by the paker and pushed up against the pane of glass. In less time than it takes to relate it a crowd of over 50 people had gathered in front of the store and were much amused to see the battle the rat put up. The latter was finally subdued and given to a pussy who was anxiously awaiting the results of the battle.

Ask Your Doctor

You may cough tomorrow! Better be prepared for it when it comes. Ask your doctor about keeping Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in the house. Then when the hard cold or cough first appears you have a doctor's medicine at hand. Your doctor's approval of its use will certainly set all doubt at rest. Do as he says.

STRUCK BY AN AUTO

Walter McNally Was Badly Injured About the Head

Walter McNally, aged 16 years, son of Mr. and Mrs. Owen McNally of North street, met with a painful accident last night. He, in company with many other youngsters, was skating on Pond street. About 8.30 o'clock he was skating down the hill and upon reaching the corner of Perry street collided with an automobile. He struck the rear of the machine and sustained an injury to his forehead. The driver took the injured boy to the office of Dr. G. M. Randall in Middlesex street, where the wound was dressed. The boy was later taken to his home in North street.

COURT CROWDED

Strike Leaders Smiled and Nodded to Friends

LAWRENCE, Feb. 9.—That Strike Leader Joseph Eitor and Arturo Giovannitti were responsible for some of the riots that have occurred here during the textile strike was the contention of District Attorney Henry Atwill when the men were given a hearing in the police court today. The government tried to prove that as a result of the advice and counsel of the defendants riots occurred, during one of which Anna Lopizzo was shot and killed.

But five of the more than a score of witnesses had testified up to noon. Numerous objections to the questions of the district attorney were made by counsel for the defense and some of the witnesses were hostile to the government in the opinion of the district attorney. It was believed that no decision would be rendered before late today, and it was thought that possibly the case would continue tomorrow.

THE COURT PROCEEDINGS

(By The Sun Staff Correspondent)
Half a company of the militia guarded the police station during the morning. This precaution was taken to disperse any possible gathering of the curious. The courtroom is very small and because of this only those connected with the case were allowed to be present. Many persons who desired to witness the proceedings were turned away at the doors of the station.

After the regular session of the police court, Joseph J. Eitor and Arturo Giovannitti were tried on the charges of accessory to murder.

Eitor was arrested on Tuesday night, January 30 and Giovannitti early in the morning of January 31. They were arraigned before Associate Justice Fred S. Chandler, Wednesday, January 31. They were represented by Atty. George H. Towser, Jr., Boston. Both pleaded not guilty. The cases were continued until Feb. 9 and in the meantime the defendants went to jail, bail having been refused.

Defendants Smiled

Eitor was the first to come into the dock from the room down stairs. He was followed by Giovannitti. Both smiled as they greeted their counsel and friends in the spectators' row. When Eitor and Giovannitti came into the police station, they smiled to the newspapermen and shook hands with them. Both were clean shaven. Both looked none the worse for their ten days' confinement in the Essex county jail. As pleas of not guilty had already been entered no pleas were entered this morning. Atty. John P. S. Mahoney of Lawrence made his appearance in the case as counsel for Eitor, while John S. Lynch of Boston appeared for Giovannitti. George E. Roemer, Jr., was associate counsel in both cases, having appeared for them and strikers since the trouble began. Leone Muel, who is associated with Mr. Roemer in the law business in Boston, was also in court and busied himself taking down notes of the trial.

A THREATENING FIRE

Broke Out in a Store in Middlesex Street Today

A telephone alarm this afternoon called the department to a fire in the W. H. and B. Howe estate at 316 Middlesex street. The place was occupied by Philip S. Saklad, a furniture dealer. This morning about 10 o'clock the proprietor of the store was cleaning a stove with what he thought was kerosene, but it proved to be gasoline and caused quite a fire. The men in the store, however, extinguished the blaze before much damage was done. This afternoon a fire undoubtedly caused by the former

BOY KNOCKED DOWN

He Was Struck by a Double Runner

Charles Killey, aged 10 years, son of Police Officer William H. Killey, narrowly escaped serious injury late yesterday afternoon, when he was run down by a double runner at the corner of Hancock avenue and Clark street.

The boy, who was coming with a number of other boys, was returning to Fletcher street after coasting down to Hancock avenue, when he was struck by a double runner which he did not see. The little lad was thrown with force to the ground and was picked up in a semi-conscious condition. He was removed to his home, 5 Rockdale avenue where it was found he was suffering from a severe wound in the forehead.

Three who saw the accident say the boy was lucky to escape with a wound in the forehead, for the double runner was going at a good speed and was well loaded. The boy, however, was able to attend school today.

COMMON SYMPTOM OF INDIGESTION

CAUSED BY FERMENTING SUBSTANCES IN THE STOMACH

Sourness or undue acidity of the stomach, which results when substances remain so long in the stomach as they ferment, is one of the most common and disagreeable of all the symptoms of indigestion. It is attended with nausea and belching and sometimes even with vomiting. Sufferers from this trouble are finding wonderful relief in Dyspeptics, which although not a strong alkali immediately sweeten the stomach, and give at once to aid the digestion. Dyspeptics are pleasant to take and medicinal, and there is no good reason why anybody needing such a remedy could be without them. They are prepared by the C. L. Hoar Co., Lowell, Mass. # THE SAGAMORE CLUB

Held Pretty Dancing Party in Associate Hall Last Evening

One of the prettiest dancing parties of the season was held in Associate hall last evening. The affair was conducted under the auspices of the Sagamore club, and it was the fifth annual party held by the club and like its predecessors was a great success.

The Sagamore club is composed of well known young men of the city. During the summer months the members occupy a beautiful camp on the banks of Lake Umbagog, at Willow Dale. From time to time the members have entertained numerous friends at their headquarters and all turned out last evening to reciprocate the hospitality accorded them on their visits. Locally, the members are also well acquainted, and the very large attendance at the party last night demonstrated that the club is one of the most popular of the city. In the face of several winter attractions the hall was comfortably filled and all thoroughly enjoyed the evening's festivities.

The hall was beautifully decorated and there was a gorgeous display of red and white bunting, draped here and there with touches of green that made an effect most pleasing to the eye. The stage was set with bunting of the prevailing colors and a row of potted plants and palms lined the front, all but cutting off the view of the members of the orchestra who furnished excellent music for the affair.

The program opened shortly after 8 o'clock with a concert of popular airs by the orchestra. At 8:30 the first dance was started and from then until 10:30 there was a series of feature numbers enjoyed. After the intermission dancing was resumed and continued until midnight.

One of the features of the evening's entertainment was the singing of John R. Myers. Mr. Myers sang during the dances and his clear baritone voice of fine quality rang out with great effect. Particularly in one number did he make a decided hit. This was his rendition of the popular "College Rag." He was obliged to respond to no less than seven requests. Another number that was greatly enjoyed was "Good Old Winter Time." Mr. Myers sang the latter with great expression and, as in all his numbers, several requests were demanded. The evening's dance order issued by the club was of a very pretty design. The cover showed an embossed wreath of flowers around the edge, while the center was hand tinted in purple. The inscription in old English letters "Sagamores—1912" in dark purple stood out conspicuously over the tint of the lighter shade.

The affair was attended by many friends from other cities. Among the out of town people present were Messrs. Agnes Bergeson, Eleanor Forrest, Martha Forrest, Ella Roudreau, Adele Van Ouse, and James Danahy of North Cambridge.

John J. Loughran was general manager of the affair and contributed much to its success. He was ably assisted by the following: assistant general managers, Ralph T. Chapman and Eugene W. Knowlton; floor director, William H. Sullivan; assistant floor directors, Thomas J. Durkin and Fred J. Lincoln; chief, John R. Coughlin; treasurer, Edward T. Draper; aids, Albert H. Smith, Arthur T. Cull, Richard Durkin, Joseph Sullivan, John Sheehan, Frank Whalen, Francis J. Loughran, William Campbell, John McQuade, John Durkin, John P. Ward, John Duggan, Robert Loughran, Bernard Kane, John Reedy, Joseph Mahan, Andrew A. McCarthy, John Day, John Harlow, William Brady, Thomas J. Fay and William O'Malley.

NORTHROP—The death of Mrs. Northrop occurred suddenly at her home on Hills street, Groton, Sunday morning. Although Mrs. Northrop had not been as well as previous to a severe attack of pneumonia, a year ago, she was nevertheless able, and preferred to do for herself, and therefore rented a couple of rooms in the same house with her daughter, Mrs. Allen Patterson. On the morning in question she started her fire and prepared her breakfast as usual, and also, as was her custom, Mrs. Patterson and her small daughter Ethel came in to see if she was all right. As the child entered the room her grandmother remarked "I don't want any

EXQUISITE LOVELINESS OF HAIR AND SKIN

(Auntie Bly in The Realm.)

"The exquisite loveliness of English girls' complexions can be gained by American women who take the same care. Instead of powder and paint, use a simple lotion made at home by dissolving an original package of mayatone in a half-pint of witch hazel. Apply in morning, rubbing gently, and your complexion will be as clear, soft and healthy as a baby's—with no dark or muddy discolorations."

"Abundant and glossy hair follows continued dry shampooing. Wetting, takes the life out, and makes hair brittle and colorless. Put a cupful of mayatone in a fruit jar, add an original package of mayatone, shake together, and you have a six months' supply of dry shampoo powder. Sprinkle a little on the head and brush out well. Do this every week or two and your hair will be bright, fine and wavy."

"Don't neglect a cold. You must be well to look your best. Remember, colds lead to chronic catarrh. The best remedy for colds, catarrh, sore throat, croup, etc., is Mother's Salva. It is wonderfully healing."

"As Ethel had no cake and nothing had been said about any, she understood something was wrong and called her mother. Mrs. Patterson hurried to her but was only in time to see her mother fall into convulsions from which she never recovered consciousness. Mrs. Northrop had been subject to these attacks at intervals since her illness. Her age was 75. Mrs. Northrop was from Nova Scotia but had lived in Groton for several years. She was the widow of Silas Northrop, whose death occurred a few years ago. She was married twice. Three children, Mrs. Maggie Patterson, Herbert Folkins and Silas Northrop survive her. The funeral was held from her late home Wednesday, Rev. H. A. Cornell officiating. The customary offering of choice flowers was abundant."

HARTWELL—The funeral of Ira Hartwell took place yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the Lowell cemetery chapel. The services were conducted by Rev. Geo. F. Kennefick, pastor of the First Trinitarian Congregational church. The bearers were Messrs. Harold W. Harry C. and Geo. W. Hartwell and C. E. Moody. Burial was in the family lot in the Lowell cemetery. The funeral arrangements were in charge of Mr. George W. Pease, under the direction of Undertaker George W. Healey. Mr. Hartwell was well known throughout New England in his business as a contracting stone and brick mason. He said the first trunk sewer in this city, and built many of the foundations and large chimneys of Lowell's mills. Mr. Hartwell was overseer of the Tremont and Suffolk yard 50 years ago, and was connected with the Locks and Canals for years. He built many of the depots in New Hampshire and Massachusetts for the Boston and Maine railroad. He was born in New Bedford, N. H., in 1819, and came to Lowell when 18 years of age and has lived in Lowell ever since. He leaves one daughter in Manchester, N. J., Mrs. Irene Moody, and three grandchildren, and five grandchildren of Lowell. The funeral was in charge of Undertaker George W. Healey.

KYLE—The funeral of Mrs. Orna M. Kyle took place yesterday afternoon at two o'clock from her residence, 405 Second street. The services were conducted by Rev. James M. Craig, pastor of the First Presbyterian church assisted by Rev. Samuel A. Jackson and Rev. Benjamin A. Willmott. The bearers were Messrs. Joseph V. M. Nova, Modesto da Luz, Nelson C. Hill, W. W. ### FATHER SEEKS $3,000

BOSTON, Feb. 8—Ephraim Stone of Somerville is named defendant in a suit for $3,000 filed in the superior civil court yesterday by Harry Beresovsky, through his father, Jacob Beresovsky, to recover damages for injuries received by him in a fire, Dec. 28, which the complaint charges was set by the defendant or his agents, in a tenement house at 35 Cooper street.

A young Beresovsky, who is a minor child, was burned severely and still is confined at the City hospital. The fire started shortly after 5:30 o'clock in the evening in the basement of the dwelling owned by Stone, and had the appearance of being set. The Beresovsky boy lived with his father on the third floor and was burned while attempting to escape.

Two declarations filed by the plaintiff's attorneys, Kalesky & Cohen, states the boy's injuries were caused by reason of the "wanton and wilful act of the defendant, his agents and servants, in setting said house on fire and failing to provide safe, suitable, sufficient and proper means of egress from said building."

Since the fire Beresovsky has resided at 67 Elm street, South End. It will be some little time before his son will be able to leave the hospital.

AN INTERESTING TALK

REV. FRANCIS J. MULLIN,
Spiritual Director.JOHN J. HAVILAND,
President.Wm. F. Thornton Relates the
Story of Paul Clifford

The Holy Name society of St. Michael's church, conducted a smoke talk and entertainment in Odd Fellows hall in Bridge street last night and if the attendance can be taken as a criterion the membership of the organization is rapidly increasing through the zealous and untiring efforts of Rev. Francis J. Mullin, the spiritual director.

Rev. Fr. Mullin, assisted by an efficient committee, arranged an excellent program for the evening and those who attended spent a very enjoyable evening. Last night's affair was one of the periodic gatherings which has materially assisted in enlisting the members to bring in new members and which has resulted in placing the society on the high basis it enjoys at the present time.

Shortly after eight o'clock President John J. Haviland of the society called to order and after welcoming the members introduced Mr. William F. Thornton as the speaker of the evening. President Haviland said that Mr. Thornton needed no introduction to the members inasmuch as he had appeared before the organization on previous occasions both in song and readings.

Mr. Thornton gave a very interesting talk on the story of "Paul Clifford," demonstrating that what the novel which he was considering sought to do was to open the eyes of society to the innumerable methods in use of handling the question of the criminal and of crime. He said:

"Richard L. Durdale, a member of the executive committee of the prison association, of New York, says: 'Over a million and a quarter dollars of loss has been caused by a single family without reckoning the cash paid for whiskey, or taking into account the maintenance of pauperism and crime of the survivors in succeeding generations and the incurable disease, idleness and insanity growing out of the debauchery and reaching further than we can calculate.'"

"It is getting to be time to ask, in our courts, our laws, our almshouses and our jails deal with the question present."

"I will quote the following from an editorial which appeared some time ago in The Lowell Sun. It was as follows: 'In the Concord reformatory not long ago a boy named Lewis Miller, aged 15 years, committed suicide while in solitary confinement. He had committed some little breach of the rules and was punished by being placed in solitary confinement for a certain period. The boy seemed to take badly when placed in the cell alone without a book, a picture or anything to occupy his attention. At night especially this matter of confining a boy in a dark room is highly injurious if not absolutely cruel. Many boys are afraid to stay alone in a dark room, and especially might they be timid in a dark cell in a reformatory. Corporal punishment is forbidden in the state reformatories, but there is no boy who would not prefer a whipping to being placed in the solitary confinement provided in the reformatory. These so-called reformatories belie their name, for strange to say, when a boy goes to one of them for the commission of one crime, he returns fit for the commission of many. Why call such places reformatories? It is a misnomer. The whole system is wrong and instead of reforming the youth sent to them, these institutions either send them to death or else make them confirmed criminals. It is time the state authorities investigated the reform system with a view to making them reformatories in reality as well as in name.'"

Mr. Thornton then referred to the subject on which he was going to speak—"Paul Clifford." He said that the novel of Paul Clifford was written by Sir Edward Bulwer Lytton, who was born in 1803 and died in 1871. His father was an Englishman, and his mother was an Irish woman. At the time of his death he was acting as British ambassador to Paris. The novel of Paul Clifford was written in 1838, in England at that time highway robbery, as well as several other crimes were punishable by death.

Continuing Mr. Thornton said: "This novel so far differs from the other fictions by the same author, that it seeks to draw its interest rather from practical than ideal sources. Out of some 12 novels or romances, embracing a great variety of some characters, from 'Peveril of the Rhine' to the 'Pilgrims of the Rhine'—from 'Rienzi' to the 'Last Days of Pompeii'—Paul Clifford is the only one in which a robber has been made the hero, or the peculiar phases of life which he illustrates have been brought into any prominent description."

"Without pausing to inquire what realm of manners, or what order of crime and sorrow are open to art and capable of administering to the proper ends of fiction, I may be permitted to observe, that the present subject was selected and the novel written, with a two-fold object:

"First, to draw attention to two errors in our penal institutions, viz., a vicious prison discipline and a sanguinary criminal code—the habit of corrupting the boy by the very punishment that ought to redeem him, and then hanging the man at the first occasion, as the easiest way of getting rid of our own blunders."

"Between the example of crime which the true learns from the felons in the prison yard, and the horrible acts with which the novel nation round the drop at Newgate there is a connection which a writer may be pardoned for quitting better regions of imagination to trace and to detect. So far this book is less a picture of the King's highway than the law's royal road to the gallows, a satire on the short cut established between the house of correction and the condemned cell."

"A second and a lighter object, in the novel of 'Paul Clifford,' (and hence the introduction of a semi-barbaric of travesty in the earlier chapters), was to show that there is nothing essentially different between vulgar vice and fashionable vice, and that the same circle is but an easy paraphrase of the coat of the other."

"The tragic truths which lie hidden in what I may call the philosophy of circumstance, strike through our philanthropy, upon our imagination. We see masses of our fellow creatures, the victims of circumstances, over which they had no control, contaminated by infancy by the example of parents; their intelligence either extinguished or turned against them, according as the conscience is stifled in ignorance or perverted to apologies for vice. A child who is cradled in ignominy; whose schoolmaster is the felon; whose academy is the house of correction, who breathes an atmosphere in which virtue is poisoned, to which religion does not pierce, becomes less a responsible and reasoning human being than a wild beast which we suffer to range in the wilderness, till it prowls near our houses, and we kill it in self-defense."

"In this respect, the novel of 'Paul Clifford' is a loud cry to society to amend the circumstance—to redeem the victim. It is an appeal from humanity to law."

"There is in this work a subtle question suggested, but not solved, that question which perplexes us in the generous ardor of our early youth, which, unsatisfactory as all metaphysics, we rather escape from than decide as we advance in years—viz., make what laws we please, the man who lives within the pale can be as bad as the man without."

"Compare the Paul Clifford of the action with the William Brandon, the hunted son and the honored father, the outcast or the law, the dispenser of the law; the felon and the judge; and is at the last, they front each other on the seat of justice, the other at the convict's bar, who can lay his hand on his heart and say that the Paul Clifford is a worse man than the William Brandon?"

The speaker was listened to with rapid attention by those present and during the stirring parts of the lecture so silent were the people assembled that one could hear a pin drop. Mr. Thornton delivered the lecture in a manner which reflected much credit upon him and especially interesting upon the court scene where Paul Clifford was being tried for highway robbery with his own father as the judge who subsequently sentenced him to death.

At the conclusion of Mr. Thornton's talk he was loudly applauded. Rev. Francis J. Mullin, spiritual director of the Holy Name society, after thanking Mr. Thornton for his excellent lecture, said that the book of Paul Clifford was read for thought inasmuch as it showed that if a child goes wrong and is sent to a reformatory that instead of improving the condition of the child it is apt to work the reverse for the child is thrown into the midst of others who know more of crime than the law and for that reason the book of Paul Clifford brings out many prominent things."

Mr. Thomas M. Mamie, who acted as accompanist during the evening, gave several selections, after which Mr. Eugene McCarthy rendered "Mammy's Shillin' Dance" and for an encore sang "The Ragtime Violin."

Joseph Kendrigan made a hit with his recital of "Kelly's Dream" and "The Gathering of the Clans."

Henry Curry, of the Glendale quartet, sang "Mother Macbree" and "Honey Man" both of which were well applauded.

At this point Rev. Fr. Mullin addressed the members and thanked them for the interest they had taken in the Holy Name society of St. Michael's church and also the assistance they had rendered in bringing the society to its present high standard. He said that during his stay of nearly ten years in St. Michael's parish he had found in the men his greatest happiness, for he said, while some people may say that it is work to have charge of the men, he considered it a pleasure to be at the head of the Holy Name society. "I have endeavored to do my best to assist the men," he said, "My aim is the Catholic welfare of the parish."

In speaking about his members of the society the reverend father said he knew that when he had the men with him the movement would reach out, and even though there were men in the parish who were not connected with the society he felt that they are influenced by it. He said that it is the steady and silent work that gains, in conclusion he again thanked the members for their presence.

Mr. James Coughlin, the well known reader, rendered George R. Shanon's "The Lifeboat" in a manner which was productive of well-deserved applause and in a speech he gave a very strong speech by a Quaker, Porter.

Mr. William F. Thornton then sang "Father Was a Good Old Man," after which the members arose and sang "God Save the Queen."

The success of the affair was due to the zealous and untiring work of Rev. Fr. Mullin and the Holy Name society committee. Messrs. John J. Haviland, and John Convey, John McCann, Daniel McConry, James Mullin and James Dandy.

Plan to Buy the Ancestral Home of the Washingtons In England

By CHARLES N. LURIE.

THE American who looks upon Washington as the Father of His Country and to the Englishman who considers our George "the greatest Englishman of his time" (an English writer is quoted) the proposition to purchase Sulgrave manor by Americans should be a matter of much interest. The manor, in Northamptonshire, England, is the ancestral home of the Washington family. It is proposed to purchase it by popular subscription, in England and America—but mainly in this country, of course—and to maintain it in perpetuity as a memorial to the cordial relations existing between the two great branches of the English speaking peoples.

Some doubt has been cast on the authenticity of Sulgrave manor as the genuine home of the Washington family, or, at any rate, of that branch of the family to which George Washington and his immediate relatives belonged. Efforts have been made to connect them with manors in other shires, but genealogists who have investigated the matter assert their complete belief in the genuineness of Sulgrave manor as the home of George Washington's ancestors. Corroborative evidence is found, of course, in the presence of the Washington arms over the door of the manor house, as well as elsewhere, and in the memorial brass (reproduced herewith), in the wall of the ancient manor church. The inscription reads: "Here lyeth buried ye body of Laurence Washington, Gent & Anne his wyf by whom he had issue IIII sons & VII daughters. We (which) Laurence died ye day of ano 15 & Anne deceased the VI day of October anno dmi 1554."

The brass bears also the ancient arms of the Washington family, which were used by General Washington. They formed, it is said, the basis of the stars and stripes. Description of the Estate. Sulgrave manor lies about seventy miles from London and just eight miles from Banbury Cross, the place made famous by the nursery rhyme as the destination of the cockhorse. The place was advertised for sale recently and was described as follows: "A freehold, historically interesting manorial estate, including the lordship of the manor, with the rights, royalties, privileges and appurtenances thereto belonging and comprising in all about 200 acres. The estate is pleasantly situated within the postal district of and only eight miles from the town of Banbury. The ancient manor house, which was the authenticated home of the Washington family (the lineal ancestors of General Washington, the American patriot), in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, is built chiefly of stone, is entered by a square porch, over and within which are antique carvings, including the Washington coat of arms, to which is ascribed the origin of the American flag. There is

1—Interior of Sulgrave manor church. 2—Old buildings at George Washington's birthplace. 3—Sulgrave manor house. 4—William de Herburn Washington. 5—Sulgrave church. 6—Mrs. Mary Bond Morosini and daughter. 7—Monument at Washington's birthplace. 8—Memorial brass in Sulgrave manor church. 9—Tombstone of Washington's father.

A large drawing room, once used by Queen Elizabeth."

Neither the father nor the grandfather of George Washington, Augustine and Lawrence by name, respectively, ever saw Sulgrave manor. The immortal George was the great-grandson of a Washington who came from England to Virginia in 1657. He was born in a humble house near Wakefield, Va., which contrasted strongly with the "substantial building of gray stone" back in Northamptonshire. The house itself has disappeared, but on the plantation are some very ancient little houses, or cottages, which are shown in the illustration.

According to Lossing's "Life of Washington," "the house in which George Washington was born was of a very modest appearance. It was the old homestead which the family had occupied for three-quarters of a century, with but four rooms and attics, and the stone are shown in the accompanying pictures. It is well known that there are many Washingtons of the present day, descended, of course, not from the Father of His Country, who left no children, but from his half brothers and full brothers and sisters. George Washington was the eldest of the four sons of Augustine Washington by Mary Ball, his second wife. There were also two daughters. By his first wife, who was named Jane Butler, Augustine Washington had four children, two of whom, Lawrence and Augustine, lived to maturity. The full brothers and sisters of George were named Betty, Samuel, John Augustine, Charles and Mildred. There are descendants of these Washingtons, many of them with the same family name, now living in West Virginia, New York, Virginia and elsewhere. Some of them are known to the public as army and navy officers. One, William de Herburn Washington, whose face is seen in the picture, is an engineer, an inventor and an author of note. For the most part the Washingtons of today are undistinguished folk of good lives and manners.

It is asserted that William de Herburn Washington has in his veins more Washington blood than any other person now living. Mr. Washington does not, however, boast of that fact. In a recent letter he cites the interesting fact that he began his engineering career at the same spot, in the same month of the year and at the same age as did the Father of His Country, but says also:

"I am a good deal of a democrat and have been inclined to shun rather than seek publicity on account of my birth." Mr. Washington recently completed work on a book entitled "Progress and Prosperity," which purports to be a history of human progress. He resides in New York city.

Original Name of the Washingtons.

Mr. Washington bears as part of his patronymic the original name of the Washington family. Lossing's "Life of Washington" says "the lineage of the family is traceable through 600 years to William de Herburn of the manor of Washington or Wessington, in the county of Durham, in England. According to a custom which at that period obtained among Norman families of consideration De Herburn assumed as a surname the name of his estate."

Two other interesting Washington descendants whose pictures are seen in the illustration are Mrs. Mary Caroline Washington Bond Morosini and her little daughter of New York city. Mrs. Morosini was said some years ago to be the most beautiful young woman in the United States. She is a great-granddaughter of Samuel Washington, brother of George, and enjoys the added distinction of being a grandniece of Dolly Madison, the wife of the fourth president of the United States. Mrs. Morosini's husband is the son of the late Giovanni P. Morosini, who was a partner of Jay Gould.

Uncle Sam's Care of His Feathered Friends

SCENE IN PELICAN COLONY.

UNCLE SAM, bird protector! Just imagine the old man in the star-spangled waistcoat and the striped trousers playing the role of sheltering guardian for the fowls of the air. It is not at all hard when you consider the numerous similar activities in which he has been engaged in recent years. If he can stretch his guardian arm over Cubans, Filipinos, Puerto Ricans, Guamanians, Hawaiians and Samoans, why not over feathered Americans of North American extraction?

The report of the bureau of biological survey of the department of agriculture, recently issued, gives interesting details of the government's activities in protecting the birds. It tells, among other things, of Pelican Island, which is probably the best known of the places in which Washington keeps a watch over the birds under its care. Pelican Island lies in Indian river, not far from Sebastian, on the east coast of Florida. According to the government description, "Pelican Island is little more than a mud flat, with only a few black mangroves, and two cabbage palms and large patches of grass to conceal its expanse of something less than four acres. For many years it has been the home of a large colony of pelicans, the only breeding ground of the species known on the east coast of Florida."

Prior to 1901, when the state passed a comprehensive law protecting non-game birds, their nests and eggs, and the Audubon societies placed a warden in charge of the island, the colony was in danger of extermination. Plumage hunters could easily destroy the birds for their quills, which were then in fashion as trimmings for ladies' hats, and egg collectors could carry away large numbers of eggs. One collector who visited the island in April, 1894, records the fact that in about an hour he gathered some 125 sets, which must have represented a very considerable proportion of the eggs then in the nests. "Even tourists often did considerable harm by shooting at the pelicans, merely because they furnished an easy mark or drove them from their nests, thus exposing the young to the scorching, often fatal, rays of the sun. All this is now changed. For the last twelve years the birds have enjoyed the protection of the state law. In 1903 the island was made a government reservation by executive order and placed in charge of the department of agriculture, and the warden was duly commissioned as an officer of the department.

For several seasons the birds have bred free from molestation, and the colony is now in flourishing condition. The island has been visited by naturalists, who have made careful studies of the birds. Data never before available are being collected regarding their food, molting and nesting habits, and the reservation is fast becoming a point of interest for visitors and students of nature, who are attracted by the exceptional opportunities afforded for observing the birds and studying their habits."

The report tells the story of a big adventure which befell the pelicans of Pelican Island reserve in October, 1910. The island was entirely submerged during a three day hurricane. Thousands of eggs were destroyed and fledgling pelicans drowned. The birds able to fly sought an adjacent island, too high to be submerged. When the sea quieted they all returned to Pelican Island, and by Dec. 15 the warden estimated there were 6,000 nests with eggs or young.

In its methods of nesting, feeding and caring for its young the pelican is one of the most interesting of birds. The photograph shows, among other things, how the little pelicans are fed. The young pelican is born naked. When it is about ten days old a downy plumage begins to appear, which soon changes the bird from black to snowy white. The brown flight plumage now begins to grow, showing first on the shoulders and hump, and at the age of about two months this plumage is fully developed. The young are fed on predigested fish regurgitated (thrown back) by the old birds into the tips of the pouches. Later the young birds (sometimes two or three at once) eagerly thrust their heads into the parents' mouths and get their first fishes from the base of the pouches, where the food is stored for them. It is a funny sight. Possibly, suggests an authority on birds, in this habit of the pelican may be found the origin of the myth, European in origin, in which the parent pelican tears open her breast to supply nourishment for her young. This myth derives some of its verisimilitude from the fact that the tip or hook which terminates the long and strong bill of the pelican is red. The principal food of the pelican is fish. Sometimes when the young pelican obtains a fish longer than it can swallow it sits with the tail projecting from its mouth and waits patiently for the digestion of the head of the fish.

Near Dearborn, Mich., there is a tract of 2,000 acres which is being used for the protection of birds. There are several hundred bird boxes and a system of automatic feeding devices and shelters for use of the birds in winter. They are protected also as far as possible from their natural enemies.

Future of Kaiser's Daughter Interests Europe

WHENEVER news is scarce in Berlin, which is often, in spite of the frequency of the war scares in the German capital, some enterprising newspaper man (oh, yes, they have some very enterprising newspaper people there) starts a report that the Princess Victoria Louise is engaged.

She has been reported engaged so often that nowadays few persons pay much attention to the report, thinking it like the cry of "Wolf!" in the old story. The latest story has had it that the princess has been engaged to the illustrious grand duke Adolph Frederick of Mecklenburg-Strelitz. The young man is older than the princess, being in his thirtieth year, while she will not be twenty until next September. Otherwise the match has been considered a good one by the gossip of Europe, for the family to which the grand duke belongs is high and mighty, very wealthy and very, very old.

Long ago the Kaiser was reported as saying that in one respect at least he resembles Themistocles, the ruler of ancient Athens, in that he is "blessed" by his daughter. Themistocles, it may be remembered, said that his young son was the real ruler of Athens, because, while the father was the nominal head of the government, he was ruled by his wife, and she in turn was governed by their son. So it is with the Kaiser, with this difference, that it is his daughter who blesses him, not any of his six sons. Any of those young men, from Crown Prince William down to Prince Joachim, would have a fine time trying to tell the Kaiser what to do.

In addition to being the only daughter of the Kaiser and Kaiserin Princess Victoria Louise is the youngest child of the family. She has always been the pet of her parents and her six brothers and is, naturally, somewhat spoiled. She has branched out considerably from the path of training to take care of the three little "Kaiser, Kueche and Kirche"—in English, children, kitchen and church) marked out for all good German housewives by her august father. However, her training in housewifely accomplishments has not been neglected by her mother, who has been for a long time to the women of Germany a shining example of the woman who "looketh well to the ways of her household and eateth not the bread of idleness."

In appearance the young princess is attractive, but not especially good looking. She is blond, with blue eyes, and is of medium height, resembling her father rather than the Kaiserin.

She dresses well now, of course, but in her early girlhood days she displayed an unusual dislike for frills which brought grief to the hearts of her governesses.

In her tastes Victoria Louise is said to be more English than German. This lent color to the report some time ago that she would be betrothed to the young Prince of Wales, heir of King George. There is a difference of almost two years in their ages, for the English prince will be eighteen in June, but this has not been considered an insuperable objection. The princess was one of the most popular of the foreign visitors to England during the coronation festivities.

The princess was quoted recently as saying: "I don't want to be a Bavarian or a Wurtemberger or a Viennese. I want to be an Englishwoman."

"There is no question," said Mr. Duff after his flight, "that a man with a camera in a flying machine could take pictures of any fortification in the world, even to their finest details. Of course, I was new at it, or I could have produced much better results than I got today. I had only a small hand camera, and the fact that some of my plates did not come out well was due merely to the unsteadiness of the camera as I held it. The only bracing I could do was to hold it against my chest. Besides, there was no special arrangement about my camera. I simply focused it at 100 feet and had to aim it pretty blindly. But the next time, with a camera strapped tightly to my body, against my chest, I could aim it with absolute certainty, using my hands to cling to the side rails and steady my body. I'll admit I was a little surprised to see what was on my plates. In the rush of the machine and the sting of the air in my eyes I saw only about half what the camera clearly observed and reproduced."

LOWELL OPERA HOUSE

Cohen and Harris' company presenting "The Fortune Hunter," Winchell Smith's charming comedy of rural life, will be the attraction at the Opera House, Feb. 15-16-17 with Saturday matinee.

That a playwright of these modern days need not resort to sublimity to attract the patronage of amusement seekers has been most convincingly demonstrated in the popularity of this charming comedy with its insistent appeal for the uplifting of the morals of the youth of today, and that

Winchell Smith, its author, has provided such a clean, wholesome play and filled it with lines that contain as profitable a sermon as was ever delivered from a pulpit; surrounded it with an atmosphere of joyous mirth, and punctuated it with broad comedy situations, that while never offending, make a strenuous demand for laughter, is a tribute being paid by thousands of playgoers, and a lesson to his contemporaries who desire to have their name enrolled on the roll of successful dramatists. "The Fortune Hunter" points the way. It is a wonderfully clever comedy, constructed along perfect lines, and as an example of plays constructed on a few equals and no superiors on the American stage.

KEITH'S LOWELL THEATRE

Then, the charming balletist, continues to delight large audiences with her unusual aerial act, in which she circulates through the theatre over the heads of the audience in her miniature balloon with no visible means of locomotion. She also concludes her act with singing and dancing with her "Dandies" and a most charming stage routine. Alfred, the vaudeville violinist, is the most talked-of musician that has come to Lowell in a long time. He gets a marvellous tune from the violin and whether playing the classical compositions or rag-time or in his imitations the touch of the artist is readily apparent. One need not be a lover of music to become entranced by the power of this young prodigy. Hayward and Thornton, the elongated insurance agent and the charming grass widow, in their seaside setting give one of the funniest sketches seen here in many moons. Their wit and repartee is rapid-fire and sparkling while their songs are all new and catchy. Josh Dale, the Alabama kid, sings original parodies that are up and coming. Willard and Bond, and their horse have a screamingly funny skit entitled "The Battle of Sunset Hill." Rosabelle and Doretto, the acrobats, do head-bach stunts in a most laughable manner. Frank and Thelma Rice, are head-to-head balancers and talking tumblers. Hart and Denlay in "After 20 Years," present an act combining sentiment and humor.

MERRIMACK SQUARE THEATRE

The photo-plays for the last three days of the week at the Merrimack Square theatre are among the very best produced in many months. Mention pictures of the home-coming celebration of Cardinal O'Connell at Boston a week ago are especially interesting. They show the numerous interesting events in connection with the occasion in which many Lowell people took an active part. It shows the entrance of the steamer Canopus into Boston harbor, the landing of the cardinal, and the parade through the streets of Boston.

The presentation of the delightful Irish singing playlet, "The Bride of Garry Owen," by the members of Our Stock company, is winning favorable recognition at all performances. Miss Jackson and Mr. Weston are especially pleasing in their parts and the rest of the cast is adequate. The singing of the piece is exquisitely done.

Murphy and Willard give an amusing original sketch, and Crawford and Montrose are novelty singers and dancers of merit. Miss Marie Laurens, a prima donna of recognized ability, is making a big hit in a repertoire of songs and stories. The views of Ireland, showing the various places of interest in the land of the shamrock, is an added attraction. Tonight the Merrimack Square Theatre Concert orchestra will feature Andrew Mack's favorite song, "The Beautiful Irish Rose."

Miss Salez, the eminent clairvoyant and occultist, is giving private interviews to all patrons who desire them during the week. Miss Salez will receive patrons tonight between the hours of 7:30 and 9:30 o'clock. Next week's bill will contain several well-known and high-class entertainers. Watch for the announcement Saturday.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC

Sold out again last night, and why not? With a great big show sparkling with comedy and a good seat at a low price the Academy is rapidly gaining the prestige that it has had in former years. The Hellmarch, two local acrobats who have toured the whole country, open the show and their acrobatic work is very creditable. Ralston and Fox, a giant and a midget, make a whole lot of comedy, but the Hatfield Stock company in "Dr. Quack," with Eddie La Rose as the colored brother, brings roars of laughter. His dread of the churchyard at the hour of twelve is ludicrously funny. Margaret McDonough's new song review is proving that there are a lot of singers in Lowell. Come up and test your voice.

A son was born Feb. 4, to Mr. and Mrs. Fred H. Peabody of 3 Fifth Street. Mrs. Peabody was formerly Miss Olive Dragoon.

A SHARP WARNING

Nervous Exhaustion Is Notice to Relieve the Strain and Build Up the Starved Nerves.

Nervous exhaustion, or breakdown of the nerves, is more often a blessing than anything else. The nerves have rebelled and you should be thankful it is no worse than it is. Let it serve as a sharp warning to relieve the strain and to take a treatment that will build up your nerves.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are a real nerve tonic. They supply plenty of nourishing red blood to the exhausted nerves and do not excite and urge them on to do work which they have already shown they cannot do. Medicines which whip on the tired nerves do more harm than no medicine at all. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People not only start in immediately to give relief but continue to strengthen the nerves until they are able to do their work anew.

Mrs. H. G. Williams, of No. 112 North Franklin street, Saginaw, Mich., says: "Nervousness in my case was doubtless due to worry and overwork. I merely felt tired out, weak, restless and nervous. Nervous spells came on me whenever I had any extra strain. There were no additional symptoms in my case but as I was conducting my store all alone and there was considerable detail connected with it, it is not to be wondered at that I was nervous. An old lady friend, who had used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People with good results in her family, told me to try them for nervousness. I did so. My nerves became steadier and I was cured. I can recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People as a splendid nerve tonic. I have used them for years whenever run down and found they gave me immediate relief."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are guaranteed to be free from any harmful or habit-forming drugs. They have given the most gratifying results in nervous headaches, neuralgia, nervous dyspepsia, St. Vitus' dance, and even in partial paralysis and locomotor ataxia. For a full statement of this treatment write for the free booklet, "Diseases of the Nervous System."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 30 cents per box; six boxes for $2.00, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

A day or two ago he received word from Tewksbury that his wife had passed away. Mr. Levine made arrangements to have the body taken to the Montvale cemetery and buried.

Yesterday Mr. Levine and his three children visited the grave to witness the burial of the wife and mother.

Mr. Levine raised the lid of the coffin just before it was lowered into the grave and was horrified to discover that the body was not that of his wife. He refused to have anything further to do with the burial.

Word was sent to Tewksbury, and it transpired that his wife was alive and there were other patients of the same name.

Changing Her Face

(From the Household Friend.)

Any woman not satisfied with her complexion can remove it and have a new one. The thin veil of stifling half-dead cuticle is an encumbrance and should be removed to give the fresh, vigorous young skin underneath a chance to show itself and to breathe.

There's a simple, old-fashioned home remedy which will always do the work. Get an ounce of pure mercuric iodine from your druggist and apply it at night like cold cream, washing it off in the morning. The mercuric iodine will gently absorb all the lifeless skin and leave a healthy and beautiful complexion, as fresh as a child's. Naturally it takes with it all such facial blemishes as freckles, tan, moth patches, sallowness, liver spots, pimples, etc. It is pleasant to use, effective and economical. The face so treated immediately looks years younger.

The high cost of living and the lack of well paid employment is lessening the number of marriages, increasing the number of divorces and causing more people of all ages to become public charges.

It looks now as if the Central Labor Union of Lawrence would soon bring about a settlement of the great strike. The I. W. W. leaders seem disgusted at the prospect of an early settlement. John Golden and the others who have taken practical steps for the settlement of the strike are roundly denounced by Haywood, Yates and the other leaders of the I. W. W. who tried to make the strike the pretext for a social revolution. The leaders of the C. L. U. with whom John Golden is working have not lost their heads. They are doing what they can to have the strike settled in a manner that will benefit the operatives and all the mill crafts.

ABOLISHED TRAINING SCHOOL

The city of New Bedford has abolished its training school but has not yet settled upon a definite plan of selecting teachers. In that respect it is in the same class with our own city which having now no training school, has suspended the rule by which teachers were selected by a board of supervisors made up of the grammar masters. To adopt a merit system that will be fair to all teachers and at the same time safeguard the city against the employment of incompetent teachers is one of the duties devolving upon the present school board. Upon the right selection of teachers and their proper direction depends largely the proficiency of the schools, and let it be understood that scholarship alone does not guarantee success in teaching which is an art in itself just as much as acting, pleading at the bar or practicing medicine.

THE HOME RULE BILL

After all the Unionists behaved very modestly on the occasion of the visit of Messrs. Churchill and Redmond to Belfast. That meeting of yesterday has proved their threats to have been insincere. Were home rule granted the Unionists would howl for awhile and then settle down like other good citizens to make the most of it.

Lord Churchill is right when he says that the granting of legislative independence to Ireland will vastly help the British empire as well as Ireland. It will, as he states, help to overcome the anti-British enmity which the Irish race carries to every part of the world. England has to compete with the other great nations in the markets of the world and she cannot do so successfully unless she puts an end to the wrangle that has been kept up over Ireland and Irish affairs almost continuously for the last century or we might say for the last seven centuries. If the measure outlined by Lord Churchill were not acceptable to Ireland and calculated to give her practically as large a measure of home rule as is possessed by the state of Massachusetts, it would not be accepted by Mr. Redmond, the Irish leader, in behalf of the people of Ireland.

THE MOFFATT PENSION

There are many people in this city who would like to see Mayor O'Donnell stop the $1000 pension of ex-Supt. Moffatt of the police department if he can legally do so. Mr. Moffatt appears to be in such excellent health that the ordinary layman is loath to believe him suffering from any dreadful organic disease, although at the time of his retirement we understand that he was afflicted with at least two incurable diseases. If such was the fact the receipt of a $1000 pension has proved for Mr. Moffatt a more effective specific than is Hilden's No. 3 for a cold, or the far famed anti-toxin for diphtheria.

Mr. Moffatt's case must stir a feeling of envy in the minds of the patrolmen very many years his senior and still obliged to rough it in all kinds of weather, while he, retired from disability, walks the streets the picture of health and manly vigor. There are many men in the department who would like to have his robust health even without the remotest prospect of a pension. Mr. Moffatt's disability for police duty is not so serious as to prevent him from conducting a farm in Canada; and as a farmer he is one of the healthiest looking specimens to be seen on our streets when he comes here to draw his pension.

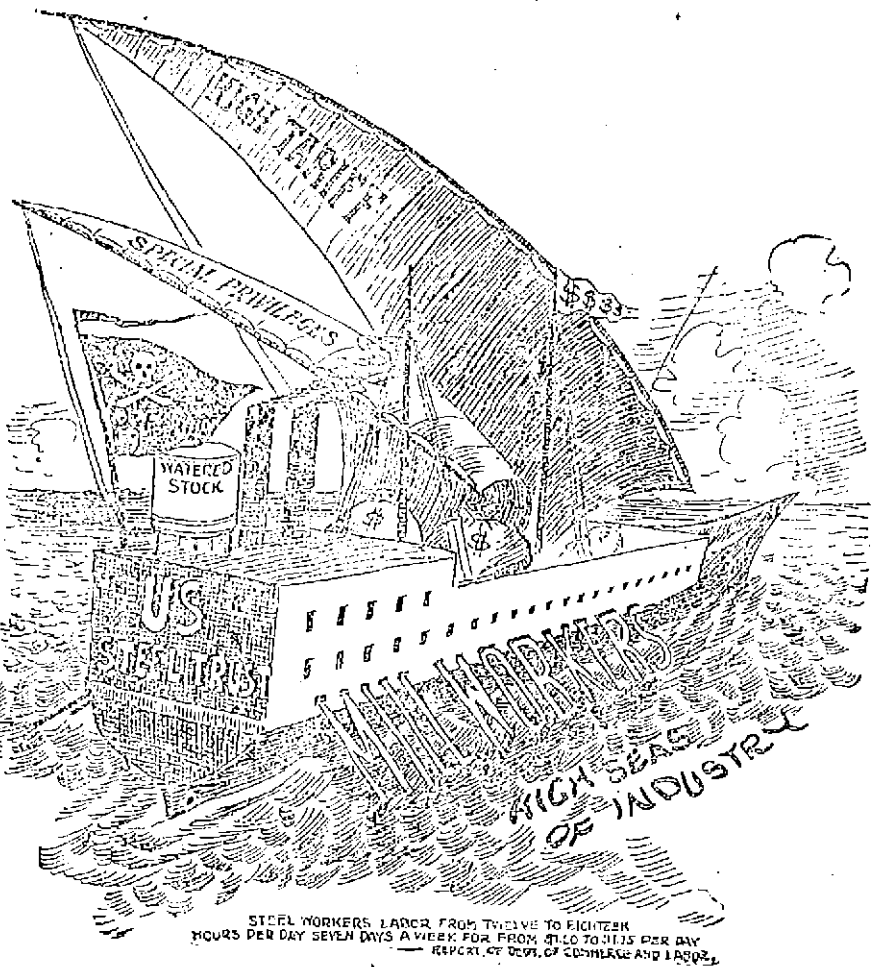

To the average citizen Mr. Moffatt's case is sufficient to condemn the whole pension system. If pensions are to be granted so recklessly, then let the employees of the city departments be pensioned off so that none of them will ever get within hailing distance of the age limit at which ossification has been favored.

With the various economic problems confronting us, with strikes and rumors of strikes, with high prices soaring still higher and wages stationary, the municipality may be excused if it tries to be just to all citizens before being so generous as to fix an annuity upon employees who so far as the average observer can see are still as well or better able to work than tens of thousands who must work from necessity. But laymen of course are not physicians and they cannot tell how near a man is to death sometimes when there's little or nothing the matter with him.

The present law should be either repealed or modified so that only those officials who have been permanently injured or who are beyond peradventure unfit for service can be retired on pension.

To the citizen who works hard year in and year out for small wages, with no promise of pension when no longer able to work, it is annoying to think that anybody can draw upon the city treasury in this manner without any real cause so far as the outward observer can discern. It is certainly wrong and unfair to the taxpayers. That is why the present municipal board should take steps if possible to prevent anything of this kind in the future, to the end that we may not build up in this community a pensioned aristocracy to live in luxury and idleness upon the earnings of others.

Far be it from us to object to a pension for the officer permanently disabled in the discharge of his duty. He, like the soldier who stands up as a target for bullets on the field of battle, deserves a pension; but if there be a pension law so lax that one can be retired for what may be but a temporary illness, a mere indisposition or for political reasons, then it should be promptly repealed.

THE MODERN PIRATE AND HER GALLEY SLAVES

EDITORIAL COMMENT

St. Paul Dispatch. Prof. William H. Bailey of Yale in the current number of the Independent, shows graphically the extent to which this is not a representative form of government. One is a government by lawyers. He finds that there are 300 attorneys in congress, or 69 per cent of the entire membership of the senate and house. The lawyers are only one-half of one per cent of the adult male population of the country, yet they constitute nearly 70 per cent of the congressmen, an overwhelming proportion, and in a position to make the laws for the people of the United States. There is in congress one out of every 250 lawyers in the country. There is one congressman out of every 50,000 of the male workers in all lines.

While 35 per cent of the male workers of the country are engaged in agriculture they are represented in congress by less than 5 per cent of the total membership. Journalism furnishes 1 per cent of the members of congress and a little more than 1 per cent of the male workers of the country. While more than 25 per cent of the men in this country are engaged in manufacturing, the manufacturing is represented by 3 per cent of the congressional membership. Thus it will be seen that the voters of the country, classed according to industries and professions, are not properly represented.

DYNAMITE INDICATORS

Worcester Post. With somewhere about 40 persons included in the indictments for dynamite as reported from Indianapolis, the truth is pretty certain to come out regarding the extent of the McNamara conspiracy of crime. If any considerable part of the indicted men are guilty, and the proof is strong enough to hold them, some will certainly reveal further ramifications if they exist. Until then it is useless to speculate on the extent of the thing, or whether it involves men "higher up."

TELLS YOU HOW TO CURE A COLD

Also Ends Severe Grippe Misery in a few hours.

The most effective and harmless way to cure the Grippe or break a severe cold, either in the head, chest, back, stomach or limbs, is a dose of Parke's Cold Compound every two hours until three consecutive doses are taken.

You will distinctly feel the cold breaking and all grippe symptoms going after the very first dose. It promptly relieves the most miserable headache, dizziness, head and nose stuffed up, feverishness, sneezing, sore throat, running of the nose, soreness, stiffness and rheumatic aching.

Take this harmless Compound as directed, with the knowledge that there is no other medicine made anywhere else in the world, which will cure your cold or end grippe misery as promptly and without any other assistance or bad after-effects as a 25 cent package of Parke's Cold Compound, which may be found in the world can supply.

After three years' research we have conclusively demonstrated that quinine is not effective in the treatment of colds or grippe.

Senator Jonathan Bourne of Oregon is supposed to be the head and shoulders of the movement in favor of the nomination of a progressive republican. The progressive league headquarters in the Evans building, Washington, occupy nearly an entire floor. Oscar Hammerstein inaugurated at the London Opera House Tuesday night the new scheme of presenting grand opera at ordinary theatre prices. The cheaper parts of the house were filled, but there were vacancies in the stalls and boxes.

"It is a great honor," said Mr. Hammerstein in an interview, "but it means a large deficit. The problem I am trying to wrestle with is how long can I keep doing it? For one performance I have taken in $2500, when the ordinary receipts would be about $5000."

William Allen White has been telling how easy it is to write a successful novel. According to him, it is no trick at all. The only requirements are an abstract idea, such as "the course of true love never did run smooth," the ability to compose intelligible English, and a medium of industry. Elaborate the idea, hang together a few incidents, write "Chick" and there you are. He illustrates his formula by describing the evolution of "A Certain Idea Man" for a Kansas City Star reporter. First of all, he decided to write a book. The next thing, of course, was to find something to write about, although, he adds, "I understand some writers don't fuss on that." He continues:

"After a while I had an idea, or a sort of abstract germ of an idea. Something to the effect that there was

HOW TO DESTROY THE DANDRUFF GERMS

BY A SPECIALIST

That the dandruff germ is responsible for nearly all the diseases to which the scalp is liable, as well as for baldness and premature gray hair, is a well known fact, and when we realize that it is also indirectly responsible for many of the worst cases of dandruff and consumption, we can see the importance of any agent that will destroy its power. We are, therefore, particularly pleased to give beneath the prescription, which an eminent dermatologist has found after repeated tests, to completely destroy the dandruff germ in from one to three applications. It will also remove the irritating scalp scales and hair loss in many cases, produce a new hair-growth after years of baldness. This prescription can be made up at 1 cent, or any amount, will put it up for you. 6 ounces Bay Rum, 2 ounces Lavender de Commerce, one-half ounce Menthol, Creosote, Mix thoroughly and after straining half an hour it is ready for use. Apply night and morning, rubbing into the scalp with the fingertips. It cost $1.50. It is powerful, and safe, and it will put it up for you. nothing to money; that is, that the man who had an ambition to do any good in the world was wasting his time and defeating his purpose if he started in the pursuit of money with the notion that money was essential to the realization of his ambition. I believed that the habit acquired in the quest for riches destroyed his capacity for good. I turned that over in my mind for about a year. Sometimes it would sizzle and sputter and boil up and rattle the lid, and sometimes it would simmer down and grow cool for a while. In the course of time I decided on a character whose career should demonstrate my theory concerning money-getting and by way of contrast, other characters who should live useful lives of simple goodness.

This was about the extent of his work preliminary to actual writing. For this task he went to Colorado, where he could be away from "office distractions, the long-distance telephone, and Stamps and Bristol." He chose Colorado because the altitude had a stimulating effect upon his heart and put him on edge for work. He established his family in a log cabin, and set up a tent in the timber of the mountain side for his workshop. He did not find it easy to start writing, however.

"My working day was supposed to begin at 9 o'clock in the morning, but the truth is, I seldom reached the tent before 10 o'clock. Then it took me some time to get down to work. I would fiddle around, turning over papers, driving mosquitoes out of the tent, killing time, maybe, for a half-hour or an hour. Finally I would get round to work. From then on until late in the afternoon I would sit at my typewriter, chew my tongue, and pound away. Each night I read to my wife what I had written that day, and Mrs. White would criticize it. While my work was real-hot I couldn't get any perspective on it—each day's manuscript seemed to me the finest literature I ever had read. She didn't always agree with me. When she disagreed with anything I wrote it away after a row, and rewrote it the next day."

When he had written thirty thousand words, he "ran aground," but, under Mrs. White's encouragement, got away again. He had not constructed any framework for the chapters, or for the book as a whole, as "Chick" wrote, and kept on writing. He knew what the end was to be, but not how he was to get to it. Also, his whole attention was given to the narrative. The style took care of itself. His characters, which like his scenes, were purely imaginary, began by being artificial to him, but after a while grew very real. When one said, "wasn't broken up over it." Thus he went on until he had written three hundred thousand words. Then Mrs. White interfered, and at her insistence he wound the story up. He had averaged two thousand words a day, and during the last few chapters, averaged a word a day for several days. He wrote a day for several days for it, but it did not answer for two years—the author was revising it. Seven times the alteration and interjections became so numerous and confusing that even he could not make all of them out, and so the story was entirely rewritten, and seven times in the process it lost one hundred thousand words.

ROME, Feb. 9.—The meeting of the inter-parliamentary peace congress is to be held tomorrow at Brussels is regarded here as most important to the decision of the members of the Italian group not to participate indeed to sever their connection with the union if the meeting insists on discussing and condemning the action of the Italian government in the war with Turkey. At the last meeting of the inter-parliamentary congress, held at Paris in October, an Ottoman representative presented a motion expressing the wish for the intervention of the powers in order to put an end to the conflict between Turkey and Italy. The Italian pacifists were present did not object to this motion but entered a protest which was drawn from the meeting when other delegates presented a motion blaming the Italian government. Encouraged by this action the Turkish delegates voted against the alleged Italian enemies, to which the Italians retorted by denying the right of the Union to intervene in such a question.

BOSTON, Feb. 9.—The use of caramel to give color to vinegar was considered as an adulteration, according to an opinion by Judge Sanborn in the superior court today and 15 complaints against store-keepers brought by the Boston board of health were ordered quashed. Judge Peterson heard the testimony of a number of experts who agreed that the use of caramel was not harmful or deleterious to public health.

BOSTON, Feb. 9.—The principal witness at the trial today of William, cook of the barge Gleadower, for the murder of Captain Wythe, was Antonio Priskich of Philadelphia, the engineer of the barge.

Priskich stated that he heard nothing unusual on the barge during the afternoon when the murder is said to have taken place and did not know the captain was dead until another member of the crew found the body. He was examined at length as to the condition and door of the lazarette, but the defense had intimated early in the week an unknown assassin must have hidden. Priskich said that the door was locked and he went throughout the trip from Philadelphia and that he noticed it particularly when taking in the hawser. The trial was suspended before the usual recess through the sudden illness of Juror Higgins of Boston. Late today it was found that Juror Higgins was threatened with pneumonia and the trial was suspended until Monday. Mr. Higgins was taken to his local hotel, doctors and nurses were supplied by the government, and a guard and a guard was placed at the door.

CHANGES WERE MADE

In the Assignment of the Letter Carriers

The local postoffice is one of the busiest in the country compared with any of its size. The furniture from the postmaster's office to the work room of the clerks and carriers has been remodeled and the latest type of furniture has been installed.

There are 60 carriers in the office, but three of them are employed on night collecting and therefore they do not use desks and that is the reason why 57 desks were installed instead of 60. Those desks are much larger than the old-fashioned furniture and they are equipped with steel wire racks which enable the carriers to do quick work.

A FINE PROGRAM

Given at the High Street Church

A delightful supper and entertainment was held at the High Street Congregational church last night. The affair was given under the title of "A Pageant of the Olden Time."

Supper was served during the early part of the evening, after which the entertainment program was carried out. The program included various characters. The opening scene was an Indian camp with Deacon Albert L. Bachelder reading from a manuscript describing the scene to be enacted.

The next scene was that of an old-fashioned grandmother with her grandchildren. The part of the grandmother was taken by Miss Jenkins.

NORTH CHELMSFORD

The members of Court Wagon

The members of Court Wagon, No. 171 Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters to the number of 150 enjoyed a sleighride last night. The party left Church street at 7:30 in a chartered sleigh drawn by four horses.

A ride was taken to West Chelmsford coming around through Chelmsford Centre and stopping at the home of one of their members, Mr. James Daley on the Richardson road where they took full possession of the house. Mr. Daley was completely surprised when the large number went in unexpectedly and he was unable to speak, although the other members of the house were prepared for the party.

to be given to the members of the society as is called for by the Catholic Total Abstinence union of the archdiocese orders being issued by Cardinal O'Connell. Fr. Doherty pointed out to the members the different vices caused by the use of intoxicating drinks and urged them to bring new members into their ranks.

He said it was his main object to bring the temperance society back to its former standing. He urged the young ladies to bring new members into their fold for a great deal depended upon them. He said they could do more in bringing the young men of the parish into the society, and to get their brothers and fathers interested in the temperance work for it was a work that one should be proud to be connected with for the man wanted in the world today was the man of strict temperate habits; a man would have sure of success and happiness if he leads a good holy life, abstaining from intoxicating liquors.

After the lecture a short musical entertainment was given. Miss Margaret Mulligan in her usual pleasing manner delighted all with her sweet voice in song as well as several recitations on the piano. After the program was carried out refreshments were served. Fr. Doherty was much pleased with the attendance and hopes that the next meeting will see new faces there who will be enrolled under the banner of temperance.
